Poetry.
Ring, Ring For Freedom, Ring!
Oh, bells of freedom, ring again!
Awake every citizen,
Roar out your message, cannon, roar!
The stars and stripes wave as of yore.
Ring, ring, old bell, ring, ring again!
Ring, ring out freedom for all men!
With courage pay the just tribute,
To prove the Declaration true.
For independence ring again.
For honor, justice, among men;
Ring out for love and sympathy,
And set each noble impulse free.
Our country's cause was great indeed,
A nation grand from bondage freed!
Ring, ring, old bell, ring, ring again,
To liberate each citizen.

From bonds of ignorance, vice and greed,
Oh let the soul of man be freed!
Ring, ring, old bell, ring, ring again!
Awaken every citizen.
Roar out your message, cannon, roar!
The stars and stripes wave as of yore.
The blessed news then quickly tell
To the inhabitants of his birthplace
Of one of our sons who has made a name for himself in the political world, has still retained in his heart a warm attitude for the old home land, and is to join in our festivities, and has consented to make a few remarks. Friends,
I ask you to join me in welcoming Honorable John Smith.

Miscellany.
DEBORAH'S INDEPENDENCE.

Deborah Hancock was busy engaged in decorating her birthday cake. She sighed as she placed the last candle, one more than the previous year. How fast these little waxen milestones seemed to multiply.
Several years before when the whole surface of the cake was so thickly studded that she could find no space for the new taper, Miss Hancock had paused to ponder.
Had not enough years of her life been told off? Was not thirty-five a good age at which to lose count?
The temptation was great. But all false pretense was abhorrent to the sturdy Hancock nature. Prevarication, even to one's self, was not to be tolerated. And what folly could equal in silliness that of attempting to conceal one's age.

In order to accommodate the increasing number of candles each year Deborah made an extra party cake. Grouped about the cake, the whole made an imposing centerpiece. Her work was done, and Miss Hancock stood back and critically inspected the result of her labor.
The tapers were red, white and blue. The republic and Miss Deborah celebrated the anniversary of their birth upon the same day.
Deborah Hancock always did a double amount of work on the third day of a year in order that she might, with a clear conscience, keep the Fourth as a whole holiday. This she had done for years, and yet no one was ever invited to help her enjoy the cake and other delicacies she annually prepared.

A light tap sounded at the door. Deborah carefully locked her pantry door before admitting her visitor.
Mother wants to know if you won't go over to the picnic with us to-morrow.
"Go to the picnic? Why, Ellen Ann, I ain't been to picnic for twenty years! Thank you ma, but—"
"Oh, do come, Miss Deb. This is to be a special one. You know we're going to celebrate the incorporation of Hiltion as well as the Fourth."

Miss Deborah hesitated. The girl, seeing this, continued to urge.
"Come in and talk it over."
With a bluish giggle the girl cast a backward glance over her shoulder. "I can't come in tonight. But you be ready and we'll stop for you in the morning."

Miss Deborah followed the girl's glance and smiled as she caught sight of a dark figure lurking in the shadow of the lilacs by the fence.
"Oh, it's Joe," she said.
Ellen Ann giggled.
"Well, I'll not keep ye. I'll think about it."

"Be sure and be ready; remember, we'll all be disappointed, me and Joel in particular, if you don't come," the girl called back as she went down the walk.
Miss Deborah smiled again as she saw the sweethearts stroll away in the fragrant twilight.

Perhaps it was the remembrance of her own unfulfilled romance which made her heart particularly tender toward lovers. Be that as it may, she was the village confidante. Many awkward youths and shy maids blessed her for the kindly way in which she had sped their wooing.

Deborah wandered down to her gate and resting her arms upon its top rail deliberated with herself as to whether she should accept or decline her neighbor's invitation. As she had told Ellen Ann, it had been years since she had taken part in the town's annual gala day. She felt that it would be pleasant to go again. There was her birthday cake. Then the cold chicken would make excellent sandwiches. All things considered, she felt rather inclined to go.

The next morning, when Ellen Ann's brother, with a flourish, brought his hay wagon to a stand before Miss Deborah's door, he found her waiting, lunch basket beside her.
They passed many similar cart-loads upon the road. Now and then a light road wagon dashed by the heavier and slower moving vehicles, while some of the town's people were a-foot. But all were headed for the same goal—Squire Cooper's big grove.

Here some of the farmers' boys were busy driving stakes to support the boards which were to serve as tables. As fast as the wagons deposited their loads there was a rush for the rough benches before the weather-stained platform. Which occupied a conspicuous place in the center of the grove.

Here it was that each year the town orators were wont to declaim. Though the rhetoric was crude and the figures of speech at times almost grotesque, the hearts which prompted the orations were filled with patriotism.
In other part of our republic is love of country more earnestly inculcated in the youthful mind than in the small towns of New England.

The exercises were opened by a long and fervent prayer by Parson Ethus Griffin. Then the schoolmaster, a spare, stoop-shouldered young man, with a peculiar intonation, which made the thinness of his voice painfully apparent, delivered the Declaration of Independence. At its close the people cheered and cheered again, and the teacher, not feeling that the applause was for the words that he had uttered and not for himself, stepped forward again and made his audience a mining little bow. Then the whole assembly awoke the echoes with "My Country, 'tis of Thee," and the people cheered again. Then Squire Cooper, who had been recently elected to office in the newly incorporated town, rose and made some remarks, but detecting signs of restlessness among the younger people, he brought his remarks down to the pith of his address.

"Fellow townspeople, I have a surprise in store for you. Hearing that this day was to be of especial interest to the inhabitants of his birthplace, one of our sons who has made a name for himself in the political world, has still retained in his heart a warm attitude for the old home land, and is to join in our festivities, and has consented to make a few remarks. Friends, I ask you to join me in welcoming Honorable John Smith."

It was some minutes before the speaker could make himself heard above the tumultuous cheering.
The speaker, mercifully drowned Miss Deborah's painful little gasps of consternation. No one noted her pale face, all eyes were upon their illustrious townsman.
With the ease of one accustomed to public speaking, the gentleman began his address.
As the smooth, pleasant voice flowed on Deborah regained in part her composure.

Honorable John Smith did not detain his hearers long. If referred to the fact that they were all more eager to attend to the oratorical efforts of their fellow townsman than to anything he might have to say. He also said that he was anxious to leave the platform and come down among them and seek out and shake hands with the old friends.

As soon as the address ended, the women began making active preparations for that all important part of a picnic, the refreshments.
Deborah felt that she must go away by herself and recover her lost equilibrium. Seizing upon two pails, she intended going to the spring for water. She started off briskly, but she heard the first clump of bushes she cast aside the pails and sat down to give her thoughts full sway.

She breathed a sigh which fluttered the pages of memory back to the record of a picnic of twenty years before. In what indelible ink had memory scratched out that! There it lay, spread out before her.
She distinctly saw the fresh crispness of her then new pink cotton gown, and she remembered the softness of her gown. And she looked back at her youthful self, Deborah felt that without egotism she might admit that she had, indeed, been a pretty girl.
Miss Deborah smiled as she contemplated the mental pictures of her youthful self. There she stood in her girlish pride, her head proudly a tilt, and a mischievous light in her eyes. But the smile was quickly followed by a sigh, as ever faithful memory drew the outline of a tall, awkward country boy, who stood beside the maid.
Ah, now the girl's lips parted, and bending her head, Miss Deborah heard the sound of a light laugh. At the sound the youth frowned, then speaks.
"Dan Quincy is a common fellow, and the girl I've kept steady company with shan't dance with him."
Again the girl laughs and then in mocking tones replies:
"A common fellow, is he? Well, his name ain't as common as some I know of, John Smith."
Even after twenty years, Miss Deborah blushes at the thought of her youthful temerity.
"If you ashamed of my name now, what'll ye be when it's my own?"
With a toss of her head the girl answers:
"Who says I'll ever bear any such common name as John Smith? If I was you, I'd ask the Legist to help me to a finer name."
"Do you mean that, Deb?"
"Yes, I do."
Thus Deborah declared her independence. She supposed John would come around that evening and "make up," as he had done so often before, but no, he had gone away from Hiltion without a word.
At this point her reverie was broken in upon by the voice Deborah had listened for so long.
"Why, Miss Hancock, what are you doing here all alone?"
"I was going for water," Deborah faltered, pointing to the forgotten pails.
"Down to the old spring? I'll go and help you. I haven't forgotten the way. I believe I remember every incident of my life here. Do you remember the picnic just before I went away?"
Deborah nodded.
"Do you know, I've often thought of that day. You see I took your advice and went to the Legislature. It took time, but I finally reached there. But I decided that if I could obtain a handle to my name it would answer just as well as if I changed it."
"I'm afraid I was very rude," Deborah stammered.
The man laughed heartily.
"It was the best rudeness I ever encountered. It made me leave here, otherwise I suppose I should have lived right along in the groove made by my ancestors. I have always been grateful for your scorn. It hurt dreadfully at first, but I came to see the other side of the question."
Deborah was amazed that the man should be so much at ease while she was filled with confusion. She raged inwardly that she could find nothing to say.
John talked of this and that, but suddenly he seemed to become aware of his companion's silence. He glanced at her, and in a whimsical tone, said:
"Deborah, doesn't the Honorable modify the Smith a little?"
"What does a name matter, anyway?" Deborah asked impatiently, "but here we are at the spring!"
The Honorable John Smith reached out to take Deborah's pail, and somehow took Deborah's hand.

"If the name doesn't matter, Deb, perhaps you'll not scorn to share it with me now."
Deborah only gasped.
"Will you dear?" and the congressman bent low to look under Deborah's hat.
"John, there's Ellen Ann, staring at us," and with a blush Miss Deborah withdrew her hand, but not until she had returned the pressure of the hand that held it.—The Home.

From the Braintree Observer.
Letter from Washington.
I have just had a chance to view the great library here, under the guidance of one who knows all about it and a few glimpses may be as interesting to others as it was to me. I found them myself.

The reading room is in the entrance hall where all the gorgeous coloring is found. Words will not describe it, the eye must see to appreciate and even then, many visits are necessary before the library in its entirety can be grasped.

In amongst the exquisite coloring are notes all of which aid in the building of character, emphasizing the fact that books and knowledge are valuable as we live our lives. I would like to make a collection of these inscriptions, so wisely chosen, and mark the title page "character." Too low they build who hold below the stars, etc.

At the foot of the staircase was a nice looking colored man who was ready to usher us into the reading room. I was told that he was Cleveland's coachman and is living his reward for carefully driving the executive.

The reading room is interesting and the apparatus much more so for it does nearly everything in the delivery of books. There is something however left for human hands, as a page must get the book from the window and deliver it to the reader. A slip is put in a tube by the attendant and is carried automatically to the desk where the book is found, a lady places the book upon the rack and it is taken by the system to the window where the page is waiting.

The gallery around this impressive mass of things have ever done on account of the peculiar coloring, the decoration and mangle being in shades of golden-brown. Statues surmount the railing, behind which are medallions bearing the names, and near these more inscriptions for encouragement and thought.

Nearly all the marble in the building is American with the exception of that in the Senate reading room which is Egyptian.

The whole library is an education and it would be impossible to pass it with eyes open and not be benefited. One who had the chance to spend much time there would be helped in many ways. Thought, time, patience, skill and knowledge have been and are doing all that is possible to make this an educational center.

Among the other books I noticed a collection of letters by the presidents of the continental congress, also the first edition of Shakespeare which is worth $5,000.

There is one very interesting set of pictures, painted on the walls that represents the making of a book or the conveyance of the thought.

First, a man plucking stones, leaving a record for posterity.
Second, an oracle giving thought and feeling to others by word of mouth, which was handed down from father to son.

Third, an Egyptian engraving the same in hieroglyphics on the outside of a tomb building.
Fourth, an Indian painting his own skin with the crude paint made by himself.

Fifth, a monk holding a manuscript written by his own hand and kept sacred under lock and key.
Sixth and lastly, a printer at his printing press, spreading broadcast to the world of today the result of time and study of story and poem.

One can consider myself fortunate to be made personally acquainted with the King of the lower regions—the chief engineer who has the care of all the great machinery. The farmhouses are many and large, and of course, more in winter than summer with the exception of those that are used for the benefit of humanity as well as the voiceless tenants who need the air just as much as the books.

The engineers paid us great attention showing us the large dynamos connected with the electrical apparatus and inviting us to put our hands on the large knife switches. There were only 120 volts on, he said, and it would only knock us down.

From the library to the capital is a tunnel 175 feet long through which the reference books are carried by an automatic railway. I was told that each year there was an average of 900,000 visitors and only about fifty entered this tunnel. I was one of the fortunate and as I stood within listening to some of the facts told by our kindly guide, I was immediately under the fountain that is in front of the building.

They are planning to build a large union station in the Nation's capital which they hope will overshadow ours in Boston and the tunnel for that will be fifty-five feet beneath the one I have been describing. Many questions were asked me about our railway, but as I didn't understand much about volts, dynamos, kilometers and engineering work in general I could not interest my guide as he and his friend had interested me in the library that morning.

Street Fruit Peddlers.
The city peddlers who sell fruit on the streets from push carts help to relieve the fruit markets to an important extent when the supply is too large to be got rid of in the ordinary way. Most of these peddlers are foreigners, Italians, Greeks and Spaniards, satisfied to work for a small income, yet many of them are reported to make large profits. One of the New York papers publishes an interview with a push-cart man who does a remarkably successful business selling peaches and bananas. He buys only the best grade of fruit and sells three bags every two weeks. This brings him in $66 from an outlay of $15. His profit is $51, or about $25 a week. In addition to his peaches, he sells about two thousand bananas a day. None of these sells for less than one cent each, and most of them sell at five cents for three. Bananas cost from 75 cents to $1 a bunch, according to quality. A bunch contains from seventy-five to one hundred bananas.

As the bananas are only a medium grade, his whole two thousand do not cost him more than $12, while he takes in at least $20. His minimum profit a day on bananas is $8, or about $20 a week. This, plus the $25 a week from sale of peaches, makes his earnings about $75 a week. Some of the push-cart men hire a number of assistants, paying them by the day, and make quite a profit from each pedler whom they employ to sell fruit and a push-cart, paying the pedler only fifty cents

SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1904.

To Build at Once.

The directors of the Young Men's Christian Association met Tuesday evening for their June meeting. Sixteen of the 18 members of the board were present, the two absentees being out of the city.

It was voted to add two members to the building committee to fill vacancies, and F. H. Crane and W. G. Shaw were chosen.

As an outcome of the building committee report, it was voted to proceed with building operation as soon as the lot could be cleared of the buildings now occupying it.

The building committee were empowered to dispose of these buildings to the best advantage possible, and to let contracts to George E. Thomas for the new building, according to present plans and specifications, to be complete outside, basement, gymnasium and first floor only.

The remaining three floors to be left until such time as the money is in hand to meet the expense. This step was taken as a basis to start upon, it being necessary to begin at once to have the building for use this year.

The action places great responsibility upon the directors and upon the community, as a sufficient fund is not yet in hand to meet conditional offers which amount to $6,000. The directors take this important step feeling that in justice to the friends who have already contributed, and the young men, the work must go on at once, hoping that all who are interested in this city and its progress will come forward, now that the building is assured and aid, not only in financing the present move, but assure a completed building without interruption in building operations.

James Francis Harlow.

Word was received Monday of the death at Asheville, N.C., on Sunday of Mr. James F. Harlow of this city, formerly City Clerk. Mr. Harlow had been in poor health for the past two years, and several weeks ago he went South in hopes that the change of climate would be beneficial to him.

Mr. Harlow was born in Boston in 1866, and was a son of Dr. James F. Harlow. He came to Quincy when a child with his parents and has since made this city his home since that time.

He was educated in the public schools of Quincy and at the Adams Academy. In 1884 he was the gold medalist. He then entered Harvard and was graduated with the class of 1888.

Later he took three years' course in the Boston University law school, and was admitted to the Suffolk bar in 1891.

In 1892 he was elected a member of the School Committee of Quincy from Ward Two, and served three years. He also served for several years on the board of managers of the Adams Academy.

He served as city clerk under Mayor Keith in 1899, and under Mayor Bryant in 1902. He was reappointed by Mayor Bryant in 1903 but served only a short time, giving up the office on account of ill health.

Mr. Harlow was for several years organist at the First church, and greatly interested in the music of the church. He was also a crack tennis player, and popular with everybody.

He married a daughter of the late Edwin B. Pratt. Mrs. Harlow died a year ago at Eastern time. Her death was a great shock, which, followed soon after by the death of his eldest son, a beautiful little boy of about four years, was more than he could bear. Since then Mr. Harlow had not been the same and at times had been dangerous to himself until finally he went to Asheville hoping to be benefited. Everything possible was done for him but without avail. He is survived by a son. Also by a mother, Mrs. James F. Harlow of South Boston, a sister, Mrs. A. F. Stankelberg of a Gloucester, and an older brother who lives in the west, who have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

Rev. E. C. Butler officiated at the funeral Wednesday noon at Mt. Auburn. After the services the remains were cremated. A number from Quincy were present at the services.

New Principal.

Edgar F. Copeland whose resignation as master of the Willard school has been accepted by the School Committee goes to the Mason school, Newton Centre, at an increase of $100.

The Mason school is one of the largest grammar schools in Newton, with a handsome new building recently completed, which is accounted the finest and best equipped grammar school building in Massachusetts. The building contains 100 seats and 90 scholars. The readings beginning with 1896 are: 65, 69, 90, 93, 95, 76, 83 and 85.

There will be no more shortage of ice cream at Remick's this season, arrangements having been made, so that Harold's celebrated cream is delivered at his place of business every morning, in his huge automobile.

Chief of Police Hayden will have nearly one hundred officers on duty the night before the Fourth, and will make every effort to keep things quiet until morning. The street railway will also have on men guarding their tracks against the placing explosives on the rails.

Rev. John A. Bernhard, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, and his wife, are expected home today from their wedding trip. At the earnest solicitation of the church people, Rev. Bernhard has withdrawn his resignation presented some weeks ago and will remain in Quincy.

In the published necrology of 1904, James Francis Harlow, born 31 Jan. 1866 at Boston; died at Asheville, N.C., of cancer of the stomach, at the age of 38 years, on Sunday, July 2, 1904.

The students in the City of Quincy are kept by James Atkins Noyes, of the Harvard College Library, Cambridge.

The four girls had a tent to themselves, and there, after supper, they usually sang, to the accompaniment of Norma's guitar, such songs, funny or sweet or tender, as belong to the repertoire of lively American girls who have had some musical advantages.
The tents of the campers were set in a row close together, and were carpeted with straw. One early night, after almost all the campers were asleep, a woman's oil-stove exploded, setting fire to her tent and to the straw matting. Running along this with the wind, it consumed several tents, among them that of the quartet. But nobody was hurt, and the girls saved almost all their things, including Norma's guitar. It was now necessary to redistribute the campers among the remaining tents, and the quartet were separated. Rose, Etta and Addie were given a small tent together, and Norma was put into a still smaller tent under a fig-tree with another burnt-out girl, named Hannah Jenson, whose home was a few miles from the fruit ranch. To prevent fires, the tents were placed at intervals throughout the orchard, and Norma found herself at some distance from her three friends.
Hannah Jenson was tall, awkward, reticent, hard-working and apparently somewhat in awe of Norma, who really saw very little of her. In this morning all worked in the fruit-cutting sheds. In the afternoon Hannah worked there, but Norma was walking or reading. In the evening Norma, with her guitar, was usually away at the tent with her three chums, where she and they had cozy suppers. Afterward, they sat crowded in the small tent and chattered and laughed and sang, never thinking to inquire whether or not tired Hannah was lonely at her solitary supper. She was usually in bed when Norma returned, and after tenting together for two weeks they had hardly more than a speaking acquaintance. Then it chanced that Hannah was employed for a few days in canning fruit at the ranch-owner's farmhouse, a task which frequently allowed her a half-hour of liberty in the late afternoon.
Norma, returning from a walk one afternoon, saw Hannah sitting alone in the shade of some bushes.
"Hannah's singing!" thought Norma, curiously, catching a slight sound. She listened, unseen by the other girl, who was softly and slowly repeating songs she had heard the quartet sing; the funny songs, the pretty ones—everything she could remember.
Such mistakes in words and tunes! Norma thought it all very funny. Hannah crooned on, repeating, as if it were a lesson that she must learn. Her voice was poor, and she made little meaning of the lines.
"I wish the girls were here!" Norma thought, merrily. "I'll tell them to-night. Won't it be a joke? Hannah'll never know. Why, she's been treasuring up everything she ever heard us sing!"
Then, with a good impulse to help the poor, awkward girl, she raised her trained voice, softly and sweetly singing a line that Hannah was attempting. Up sprang the girl, startled, embarrassed, the color rushing over her face. Norma sang the line again. "That's the way, Hannah," she said. "I'll sit down here and show you how those songs go. If you'll let me."
Hannah's cheeks burned deeper. "I guess I must be going," she said, and she hurried away to the farmhouse.
Norma looked blankly after her. "That's what I got for trying to be a friend!" she thought. "What a girl!"
Norma was a good mimic. That evening she imitated for her three chums Hannah's funniest mistakes. The other girls caught them up, and Geraniums.

DART FAIRBANKS
Geraniums! Geraniums!
With brave and steadfast eyes,
Ye face the darkest day that comes,
The bluest sunset skies;
For shade and shine are one to thee,
And come what may your blooms are free.
So bright, so brave, so tried, so true,
So sturdy and so gay,
We somehow grow to look to you,
To cheer the winter day;
But bright and plump, and every day,
Your loyal blooms will never fail.
No veil of myth or mystery
Hath romance round you flung,
Nor song hath past sung;
But bright and plump, and every day,
You cheer us on our common way.
No crown of moss, no sweet perfume,
Nor lace-like verdure rare
Doth nature give thee; but by bloom
Hath brightness and to spare;
And taught our better hearts to learn
To teach the lesson of content.

Reception to Pastor.

The parishioners of the Swedish Lutheran church tendered a reception, Thursday evening, to their pastor, Rev. John A. Bernhard and his bride. The reception was very largely attended and was held in the church on Grand street.

The church was very prettily decorated for the occasion. The reception was at 8 o'clock, Rev. and Mrs. Bernhard being assisted in receiving by Rev. J. A. Anderson of Campello and Mr. August Weeden. The ushers were Fritz Swanson and Albin Dahlstrom.

After the reception Mr. Weeden made a few introductory remarks, and presented Rev. Mr. Anderson who made the address of welcome, and presented Rev. Mr. Bernhard, in behalf of his parishioners with a purse of money, over $200.

Rev. Mr. Bernhard responded briefly, thanking his people for their most generous gift. The young men of the Fratern club then presented Mrs. Bernhard with a handsome bouquet.

There was also a brief address by Andrew Nelson of Brookline.

Refreshments were served during the evening and there was music by the choir.

Lid Nailed Down.

After an all-night session on Wednesday, the Selectmen of Revere decided to grant no licenses for entertainments on Sundays. The Boston Journal says:

"It was a wise decision. They saw, doubtless, that notwithstanding the new law, there would be endless trouble over the character of the shows and the amounts which the latest legislation demanded to be paid to charity. If there were no loopholes in the law, there were at least places where the vulgar entertainment could maintain itself while fighting for life. Now the whole matter is simplified, and the unsatisfactory performances have got to stop."

"We do not believe the new ruling will cause any hardship to the thousands who flock to Revere Beach every Sunday. Nature will do as much for them as vaudeville shows, and in a little while the deprivations will not be felt. The atmosphere of the place cannot fail to be improved, and its influence will be much better than in the old days."

"Incidentally, the sham of 'proceeds to charity' was very nearly revealed by one of the showmen, himself, at the selectmen's hearing, when he declared that the entertainments could not be profitable unless they were run on Sunday. Nature will do as much for them as vaudeville shows, and in a little while the deprivations will not be felt. The atmosphere of the place cannot fail to be improved, and its influence will be much better than in the old days."

A Funny Yarn.

The Boston Journal tells, a queer story about Hull this week. It says: "Hull is in a ferment of excitement over the mysterious antics of a supposed crazy man, who has declared himself to be a murderer, who committed suicide, once again, and is now possessed by the power of psychical disappearance."

"The man has the police and the entire eastern part of the town on the worry list. He appeared about 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon on the shore, where he met the veteran life-saver, Samuel James. Mr. James was about to row out to a yacht, and the man asked permission to go with him. Mr. James refused. He rowed out to the yacht, and when he arrived there the man confronted him. Scarcely able to believe his eyes, Mr. James asked him how he got there. He told him by 'the power of spiritual disappearance.'"

"When he returned to the shore Mr. James took the man ashore, accompanied by Miss Mallard, whom he had taken from a nearby yacht."

"Arriving at the landing, the man ran ahead and got into Mr. Ward's cottage. He locked himself in his chamber. When Miss Mallard found he was there she screamed for help, and Mr. James rushed to the rescue. Pounding at the door he demanded the man to come out. He refused. They pounded again, and suddenly the door opened. Rushing in, Mr. James found the room deserted. He looked under the bed, and everywhere else, but no man."

"With a bewildered look, he walked down the path from the cottage to the street, only to meet the man again. He ran into the house again and got into a closet. Mr. James followed and dragged him out."

"The police are searching the town but cannot find him. He is apparently 30 years old, deformed, with a wild stare in his eyes. His really remarkable disappearances and reappearances have the police and the residents of the town worried, fearing he will do some one harm."

Soldiers' Bounty.

It can be said very positively that all the questions about the validity of the state bonds to be issued under the law, and other questions relating thereto, have been settled, and that Treasurer Bradford will sign the bonds for the bounty to pay the soldiers.

While the committee has not decided anything officially on that point, it is likely that the claims which are backed by proof enough to render them beyond question will be taken up first and settled. Meanwhile, if proof is needed on other claims, the applicants can learn from the state what evidence is needed.

What is demanded is, essentially—Proof of enlistment by this state. Evidence (by records) that no bounty was received.

Satisfactory evidences of identity. Circulars will be sent to applicants as fast as possible, explaining all that the state wants.

A Strange Disease.

The news from Lynn this week is, one woman in each mother at the point of death, by a mysterious malady which has made its appearance in that city and which Brookline and Cambridge specialists who have been called in have been unable to identify; the disease resembling dysentery and ptomaine poisoning, but being neither.

According to the doctors, the disease attacks one much as dysentery does, being followed by total collapse.

A queer feature of the case is that the other members of the afflicted families have escaped the disease, though they have eaten the same food as the victim. The State Board of Health was called in on Friday.

Judge Flint has appointed Don Gleason Hill as conservator of the estate of Charles C. Sanderson of Dedham, who recently married a woman much younger than himself.

Very truly yours, James F. Jackson, Chairman.

Mr. Peter T. Fallon, Quincy, Massachusetts.

This nation is, of course, the greatest on the continent and has the best right to the name. It happens, however, that none of the other countries in either North or South America cares to quarrel with us in regard to the use of the word.

Our northern neighbors never think of calling themselves anything else other than as means. Far too much importance is attached to success until nothing short of victory will satisfy the contestant or his friends. Questionable methods become lamentably common. Players early are taught that skill in disguising rules is a prime requisite of a successful athlete. And the worst feature of this lamentable situation lies in the fact that it is largely graduates of our leading colleges and universities who are engaged in this demoralizing business.

Headmaster Stearns of Phillips, Andover.

The Salvation Army held a picnic the Fourth at Faxon park.

WEST QUINCY.

Arthur the 7 year old son of August Eliason of 11 Nelson street was drowned July Fourth in a quarry hole on the North Common. Very truly yours, James F. Jackson, Chairman.

Mr. Peter T. Fallon, Quincy, Massachusetts.

This nation is, of course, the greatest on the continent and has the best right to the name. It happens, however, that none of the other countries in either North or South America cares to quarrel with us in regard to the use of the word.

Our northern neighbors never think of calling themselves anything else other than as means. Far too much importance is attached to success until nothing short of victory will satisfy the contestant or his friends. Questionable methods become lamentably common. Players early are taught that skill in disguising rules is a prime requisite of a successful athlete. And the worst feature of this lamentable situation lies in the fact that it is largely graduates of our leading colleges and universities who are engaged in this demoralizing business.

Headmaster Stearns of Phillips, Andover.

The Salvation Army held a picnic the Fourth at Faxon park.

WOLLASTON.

He is bound to the street for a couple of days for assault on Officer Donovan. When immediately arrested upon a complaint for assault on Officer Donovan. When immediately in court the case was continued until today. Shugrue was confined by Judge Devey.

George H. Field has erected a 35-foot flag pole at his residence at the junction of Franklin street and Independence avenue.

Miss Annie M. Cahill of South Quincy was a passenger on the steamship Ivernia on Tuesday. She will visit Ireland, returning about September 1.

The Quincy Patriot.

Launching Today at 1 O'clock.

The Rhode Island officials who were disappointed at not being present at the launching of the battleship Rhode Island do not propose to get left again. A large party of state and city officials left Providence early this morning for the launching at the Fore River of the new passenger steamer Providence for the N. Y., N. H. & H. steam. Gov. Garvin has been invited to attend and he has accepted.

Mayor Miller, as the representative of the city after which the steamer is named, has selected Martha Wilson, daughter of Edmund R. Wilson, to perform the christening.

The train will be sent over the company's freight track from Braintree and will arrive at the yards at 12:30. A number of prominent N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and state officials are expected.

The new passenger steamer will when completed be one of the finest passenger boats in service. In fact a floating palace.

Length over all, 397 feet. Extreme width, 40 feet. Beam, 50 feet. Depth, 21 feet.

In her double bottom hull there are fourteen water tight compartments, and above her main deck are seven water tight collision bulkheads. These make her practically unsinkable.

The paddle boxes are concealed in the superstructure. She will carry 1200 passengers. Her engines are in a steel enclosure with an auxiliary electric lighting plant for 1600 incandescent lights.

She will also have a steam steering gear, steam heating and a modern system of ventilation.

Trial Trip.

The builders' trial of the steamer "Boston," which was to have taken place Friday, was delayed off as there was no wharf in Boston at which she could be docked.

She will leave the work of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co., however, today, at 12 o'clock, and steam directly to New York where she will be docked at the Erie basin.

Her bottom will then be scraped and painted. On Wednesday she will leave on a four-hour endurance test run from New York to Newport. Some days later she will be taken out for her standardization test.

The steamer Boston is one of the most perfect built freight steamers afloat. She is a twin screw propeller and of the most modern construction and general equipment.

Total length, 318 feet. Moulded width, 60 feet 6 in. Moulded depth, 22 feet 6 in.

Her motive power will consist of two cylinder triple expansion engines. Steam being supplied from eight Scotch boilers.

In addition to carrying freight she is provided with accommodations for 410 passengers. She will cost complete hull a million dollars.

The prime consideration in her design has been safety from any chance of sinking or burning. She was launched March 2, 1904.

The Dorothy Q. House.

As the constant influx of visitors is retarding the repairs on the Dorothy Q. house, the public of Quincy are requested to defer any intended visit until the house is completed, and formally opened to the public, when a day will be selected and the house opened free of charge to the people of Quincy free of charge.

A number of prominent citizens in Quincy interested in the preservation of this beautiful and historical home, have generously contributed toward its full completion and furnishing. These contributions go always through the hands of some member of the society of the Colonial Dames and are in each case acknowledged by a receipt from the society's treasurer.

Mrs. Edith G. Wendell, President.

Interclub Yacht Race.

The third of the interclub races between the Quincy, Wollaston and Squantum Yacht clubs will be sailed off Houghs Neck today, under the auspices of the Quincy Yacht club at 2 P. M. There will be three classes of sailing boats and a launch race.

In Class A there will be three prizes of $5, $3 and $2; in Class B, prizes of $4, $2 and $1; and in Class C, prizes of $3, $1 and $1. Measurements to be the water line plus one-third the overhangs. In the launch race prizes of $4 and $2 are offered.

The preparatory gun will be fired at 2 o'clock. Class A will get away at 2:05 and the other classes at intervals of five minutes.

Samuel Milton Jones, the "Golden Rule" boy of Toledo, Ohio, died of asthma on Tuesday. In 1897 he was elected mayor as a Republican. It was then he earned the title of "Golden Rule" boy. Hundreds of people called at his office, looking for pecuniary assistance. Never did one go away without something to alleviate pain, hunger or thirst. In 1899, 1901 and 1903 he was re-elected mayor of Toledo on an independent ticket. He advocated the eight-hour law, municipal ownership, direct legislation and other measures almost socialistic.

The gipsy and brown-tail moths are causing much trouble and annoyance in Boston, Cambridge, Charlestown, Southwicks, and other towns in that vicinity. Trees and shrubs are devastated of their foliage. So thick were the moths on some buildings that they looked as though there had been a heavy snowfall. Chelsea has spent $15,000 so far this season in killing these moths. The moths are now in the winged state preparing to lay their eggs on the trees.

Over 40,000 employees of the great packing houses in Chicago, New York City and Omaha are on a strike, the result of a stubborn disagreement, chiefly over wages for unskilled labor, and the meat eaters are suffering over the high price asked for the same; and prices will probably go much higher if strike continues.

The new church of the Christian Scientists at Concord, N. H., will be dedicated Sunday, July 17, and seven special trains will be run from Boston.

Sergeant-at-Arms Remington gives notice that the State House will be open G. A. R. week until 10 P. M. that comrades and friends may see the old battle flags that grace Memorial hall.

Jason W. Butlers, an ex-lieutenant of the Boston police department, assumed the office of chief of police of Hyde Park Wednesday evening.

CITY BRIEFS.

John P. Bainbridge is in New York on a business trip.

Miss Mabel Lapham is spending her vacation in Maine.

Officers Barry, Murray and Hinchon are enjoying their vacations.

Warren Anderson has gone to Old Orchard beach for a few weeks.

Harry Taylor, son of George W. Taylor of Elm street, is ill with typhoid fever.

Miss Ellen Swanson and Miss Nellie Moffitt have gone to New York on a visit.

Mr. Abbott L. Melcher of Bigelow street has returned from a visit at Webster, N. H.

Mrs. W. W. Parry and Misses Grace and Ruth of Barre, Vt., are guests of Miss C. S. Hubbard.

Papers have passed transferring the William Field estate on Adams street recently sold at auction.

Chief Hayden has received the new automatic pistols which are to be distributed to the police.

Mrs. Wood and daughter Miss Edna of Upland road, are attending the convention at Northfield, Mass.

Samuel Curtis of Cottage avenue celebrated his seventeenth birthday Sunday in an informal manner.

The fancy tomatoes and cucumbers that Johnnie Bros. are handling come from the Montauk greenhouses.

Mrs. Mitchell Willis left Wednesday for an extended visit with friends and relatives in Albany, New York.

After ten days pleasantly spent with friends at St. Johns, N. B., Manley Perry has resumed his duties with S. K. Ames.

Miss Charlotte Kingman of Maple place left today for Northfield, where she will take a much needed rest for two weeks.

Hugh P. Tracey has taken possession of the Benjamin Curtis estate on Washington street, which he recently purchased at auction.

Esther, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Beckford of Washington street, is the guest of Priscilla Raymond at Plymouth for a week.

The many friends of E. Landis Snyder will learn with regret, that he has resigned his position as organist at Christ Episcopal church.

The annual Scotch games, in which many Quincy men are interested, will be held at the Calverton grove, West Roxbury, Wednesday, Aug. 3.

The Brownsie wharf club were entertained by Mrs. Annie T. Grignon at her home on Taylor street, Wollaston, Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Hayward of Coddington street are registered at the Mt. Lookout house, Contocook, New Hampshire, for two weeks.

Mr. Lucius Lawton and grandson Master George Lawton of President's hill, left Monday for Square lake, Maine, for fishing and shooting.

Everytime there is a railroad disaster the annual outing of the Young Men's Club of Quincy, Wompatuck encampment of Weymouth and the Brockton encampment of Odd Fellows at Nantasket.

Mrs. Cushing Lane, Miss Ellen Fother and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Morton are expected home today from the Isles of Shoals. The weather has been delightful there all the week and the outing much enjoyed.

Information relative to the excursion of the Quincy Granite Manufacturers' Association to Barre, Vt., may be obtained of John L. Miller, W. T. Spargo, H. S. Nicoll or T. J. Dunphy. The business men of the city are invited.

The executive committee of the East Norfolk Christian Endeavor Union met at the annual meeting of the Young Men's Club, Braintree. It was voted to hold the annual outing of the Union at Mayflower park. Many of the societies were represented and a very helpful meeting it proved.

Although Sunday was not as pleasant and warm as other Sundays this summer there was heavy riding on all lines of street cars. It was necessary to run two and sometimes three extra cars on each trip and even then the cars were crowded. Two cars were run on every trip on the Nantasket line and when the cars reached Quincy it was almost impossible to get a seat.

Andrew J. Bates, a well known citizen of Braintree, died Sunday, aged 67 years. He had served the town on the board of selectmen, assessors, overseers of the poor and surveyor of highways, and was town treasurer from 1885 to 1887. He was also a director in the Weymouth Savings bank for twenty years. Mrs. Bates is the daughter of the late Isaiah Whiton of Quincy.

Those who went on the annual picnic of the Quincy Yacht club to Northfield on Saturday had a very enjoyable time until the cars became stalled in Braintree on the homeward trip. The derailment of a regular car held them back over an hour, so that it was after eight o'clock before they reached home.

The children enjoyed the swings and the sea-saws, boat rides, croquet, baseball, running matches, sack races, tug of war, etc. It was a basket picnic, but there was ice cream and cake for all.

Joseph T. F. Borrell, formerly of Quincy, will be principal of the vacation schools at Dorchester this summer. He was practically destroyed although the loss will not be heavy. The fire made a bright illumination and from City Square it looked as though a big fire was in progress. The apparatus responded very promptly, especially the truck and hose wagon from Wollaston.

Carl Fornell, a senior at the Quincy High school, is spending his vacation at the Quincy Harbor House, Quaint, Mass. William Dunstan another young man from Quincy is acting as clerk in this popular summer resort. It was a peculiar coincidence that these two young men from Quincy met at this hotel and although friends of old times scarcely recognized each other on their first meeting. They are both having a pleasant time and speak of the resort in high terms. The location of the hotel is one of the coolest and most unique on the Atlantic coast, it being so situated that the wind blows from the Massachusetts, at what is known as the heel of Cape Cod, as to secure every passing breeze from the waters.

Miss Mabel Norris is visiting friends in Brookline.

Joseph W. Johnson and family are at their cottage at Rock Island.

Supt. Herbert W. Lull of Newport, R. I., sailed for Europe July 2.

Mr. E. Sandis Snyder of Hancock street, is at Middletown, Pennsylvania.

This is the last week of eight-cent checks on the Old Colony street railway system.

The price of all goods will advance if the packing house strike continues at Chicago.

The Merrymounts and Braintrees met again at Merrymount park this afternoon.

Miss Reed of Whitman is a guest of her sister, Mrs. F. E. Leonard of Bigelow street.

Miss Jennie J. Harris of Edwards street is enjoying her two weeks' vacation in Maine.

Copies of the Acts and Resolves of the Legislature for 1904 can be obtained of the City Clerk.

Mrs. Lewis Rodman and children of Revere road have gone to Portland, Maine, for two weeks.

Mrs. E. S. Beckford and son Leslie enjoyed an outing by boat Wednesday to the old historic town of Plymouth.

The Quincy A. C. and Wollaston Park A. A. teams will meet on the lower field at Merrymount park today, at 3.30 P. M.

Fifteen minute service on the Houghs Neck line of street cars has been much to send crowds there every afternoon.

New and higher prices have been established for scavenger work. Why it has been done many would like to know.

Dwight Burns, formerly of Quincy avenue, Quincy, had the misfortune at Stoughton on the Fourth of July to lose his arm.

On July 14, 1856, the corner stone of Salter's Sugar Harbor at Germantown was laid. The semi-centennial is near at hand.

Mrs. Frank S. Davis of Elm street and Mrs. Edwin E. Davis of Chestnut street are guests of New Hampshire relatives.

Miss Evelyn Morgan of Amherst, Mass., is visiting Miss Olive Lesher of Hancock street. Miss Morgan is a student at Holyoke college.

Paul Revere, W. R. C., at its last regular meeting, decided to hold only one session a month, the first, during July, August, and September.

Harvey Friend of the Meadow Brook cemetery, retired from the chair of noble grand of Electric lodge, L. O. P., of Brockton, on Tuesday evening.

Miss Rose McVay of Albertina street, South Quincy, has gone to New York, where she will visit relatives and friends for several weeks.

Miss Elsie Pined returned Tuesday from a pleasant visit with relatives of Brockton, on Tuesday evening.

Anthony Segreney was the purchaser of the Mayhew estate on Water street sold at auction on Tuesday. The house is known as the "Malakoff," and was built before the Revolutionary war. It formerly stood on School street opposite the old school house.

The new house building on Goddard street is for James Marr of the Smith Granite Co.

The second floor of the store at the corner of Franklin and Water streets is being improved for tenement use.

The American boys defeated the Union Stars by a score of 8 to 2 at Ward 3 playgrounds, Thursday afternoon. Michael and Moorhouse excelled for the American boys, while Pratt and E. Knight did good work for the Stars.

WEST QUINCY.

Fred C. Rannels, janitor of the Copeland club, has gone to Maine and will not return until September.

Serge David J. Barry, who has charge of the night desk at Police headquarters, is enjoying his annual vacation.

The Commissioners of Public Works asks for proposals for a heating system for the Willard schoolhouse. All necessary work is included, and preference for the gravity system is expressed. An estimate is also wanted on the quantity of coal required.

Judge Colt of the United States circuit court has confirmed the recent sale of the property of the Quincy Granite Quarries Co.

Mrs. Mary S. Leavitt of West Quincy will serve on the staff of Mrs. Sarah D. Wiggins, National President of the W. R. C. at the Boston convention.

Considerable money is being expended on Willard street this year and the street should need no repairs for some time.

First the street was paved on the west side from Manxess shed to Robert street, and then macadamized on the east side. Then a sidewalk was built on one side from Robertson street to the Milton line and now the city team is resurfacing the street on the east side, from Copeland and Crescent streets.

A very successful lawn party under the auspices of the West Quincy Methodist church was held Thursday evening on the church grounds on Hall place.

Tables were set with refreshments and articles and refreshments were arranged about the grounds. The genial H. H. Faxon made his appearance on the scene early in the evening and distributed hundreds of tickets among the young people. He also patronized the tables liberally.

SOUTH QUINCY.

W. W. Mitchell has gone to New York on a two weeks' business trip.

Miss Alice Winifred Jones, of Yarrow street left on Tuesday for two weeks' vacation in Dundas, P. E. I., Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Dell of Pleasant street are at their cottage at Plum Cove.

J. H. Gill has gone on a two weeks' vacation to his former home at Prince Edwards island.

Those who assembled at the Ward Three grounds Saturday afternoon were disappointed because the Whitmans did not put in an appearance to play the South Quincy.

Miss Rose McVay of Albertina street, South Quincy, has gone to New York, where she will visit relatives and friends for several weeks.

Miss Elsie Pined returned Tuesday from a pleasant visit with relatives of Brockton, on Tuesday evening.

Anthony Segreney was the purchaser of the Mayhew estate on Water street sold at auction on Tuesday. The house is known as the "Malakoff," and was built before the Revolutionary war. It formerly stood on School street opposite the old school house.

The new house building on Goddard street is for James Marr of the Smith Granite Co.

The second floor of the store at the corner of Franklin and Water streets is being improved for tenement use.

The American boys defeated the Union Stars by a score of 8 to 2 at Ward 3 playgrounds, Thursday afternoon. Michael and Moorhouse excelled for the American boys, while Pratt and E. Knight did good work for the Stars.

Car Accident.

There was quite a serious accident Thursday evening on Willard street near the Milton line. Just who was to blame has not been determined. It seems that one of Abbott & Miller's express teams, driven by Angus Beaton as he was on the way from Boston with a load of iron bars, so long that they hung over the horses' heads.

As the S. S. car from Quincy approached the team the protruding iron bars struck the dasher, bending it. They also barely grazed the motorman's head and the heads of several passengers in the car.

Motorman DeHoste stuck to his post and shut off the power. Among the passengers on the car were Miss Borthia McConnell of 112 Thorndike street, Brookline, and Mrs. E. B. Redonnet of 22 Bridge street, Hyde Park.

There is a difference of opinions as to whether these two ladies jumped from the car or were thrown out. Some say they jumped out, while the two ladies say they were thrown out. Miss McConnell received a broken leg and was removed to the Hospital. Mrs. Redonnet was injured about the head and was removed to her home. The motorman and driver of the team escaped uninjured.

One of the horses was badly injured and was shot by Inspector McKay.

High School Graduates.

Herbert P. Arnold, of Harvard, a graduate of the Quincy High school, has been awarded the highest second year honor in classics at that college.

In addition to the items of this year, graduates already mentioned are the following:

Anna B. Cashman has successfully passed the preliminary examinations for Radcliffe.

Mary Kapples has successfully passed the examination for Bridgewater Normal.

Lawrence Allen has passed the examinations for the Institute of Technology and has been admitted without conditions.

Agnetta Hedman has successfully passed the preliminary examinations at Bridgewater Normal.

Red Letter Date.

Thursday evening was a red letter date for Granite Conclave 797, order of Hephatastas, as it was the occasion of the initiation of its one hundred member. Supreme Organizer C. R. Crutten of Baltimore, D. D. Sup. Archon Kallan, Supreme Treasurer Ramsay, Supreme Organizer Sullivan and representatives from Hub and Cambridge Conclaves were present.

The one hundredth member was Patrick O'Brien, and after his initiation Supreme Organizer Crutten presented him with a gold emblematic watch chain suitably inscribed.

This was followed by Deputy Kallan, who presented the convocate with a gold mounted ivory tassel, which was also suitably inscribed.

A pleasing entertainment followed and refreshments were served.

Of course you have heard that Mr. Dooley is writing again, and that the Boston Sunday Globe is the only New England paper in which his articles are printed. Next Sunday he will write on the present political situation. Dooley, you know, is impartial, and deals out facts for the reader, and is not a partisan. He will make you laugh, whether you want to or not.

WOLLASTON.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell O. Parker, Miss Ethel Parker, Mrs. S. A. Knight, and Mrs. Geo. D. Spaulding, all of Belmont street, have gone for three weeks' vacation to Hotel Eastman, North Conway, N. H.

Mrs. John D. Smith of Wollaston left Thursday for a two months trip through Maine and New Brunswick.

Mrs. William Curtis of Wollaston is entertaining Miss Barker of Springfield.

Mr. Nelson Smith of New York has been the guest of his father, Mr. Chandler W. Smith of Wollaston.

Miss Claire Jones of Arlington street is spending a few weeks at Cape Porpoise, Maine.

Mrs. Charles Bryant Fairchild of New York is the guest of her mother, Mrs. George Bryant of Wollaston.

Ex-Mayor Fairbanks leaves the coming week for an extended tour in the west.

Mr. Frederick Bishop and son Frank of Wollaston have returned from an enjoyable trip south, visiting Washington and New York.

Rev. Edward A. Robinson, formerly of Wollaston, has resigned his pastorate at Duckland, to return to Hingham his first pastorate.

John G. Thomas of Standish avenue has four of the handsomest standish any one has seen in his garden. They are one would care to see, one plant having 105 blossoms. It would well repay any lover of flowers to see them.

Boston papers report Malcolm Orr of Wollaston to have bought the William Miller estate at Saugus. There are two large lots of land, and two sets of farm buildings thereon, the whole being taxed on a valuation of $8000.

R. S. Jones is confined to his home on South Central avenue by sickness.

Mrs. Kate A. Hayden, left Wednesday for New York City, for a ten days much needed rest.

Mrs. Charles W. Dickerson of Highland avenue, Wollaston, has the sympathy of her friends, her mother, Mrs. Charles C. Doten, passing away at her home in Plymouth on Saturday.

Herbert Smith and family have taken up their residence once more at Quincy Point. Mr. Smith was a popular furniture dealer of this place until a few months ago when he moved to Boston and opened a store there.

The Lajolie A. A. of Quincy Neck would like games with 17-year-old Aquatics. Address, Peter Sullivan, captain 181 Quincy avenue.

Mrs. E. F. Hayden and family are at Duckland, Mass.

The torpedo boat destroyer Macdonough built at Quincy is now at New London.

A certain citizen of Quincy Point has suggested that a triangular seat be built around the electric-light pole at the corner of South and East Howard streets. This arrangement would provide a seat for the men who gather there every evening and would also save the neighboring fence considerable wear.

The Pro Christo Society of the Washington Street Congregational church held an informal meeting Wednesday evening with Mrs. R. H. Jones of Wollaston street.

The Old Colony Street Railway Co. has petitioned the Harbor Commissioners for authority to build a dolphin and pile structure in Weymouth River at Quincy Point. A hearing will be given July 20.

Miss George Fay has just returned from a delightful visit at Stoughton.

Manager Court announces that the Merrymounts will positively play the Braintrees at 3.30 P. M. today at Merrymount Park. This will be the second game, the Merrymounts having defeated Braintrees 7 to 4 at Quincy Point on July 2. Great interest is shown in this game on account of the game at South Weymouth Fair last year when the Merrymounts beat Braintrees 1 to 0 with Townsend in the box. A large attendance is expected.

DOWNES AND PARK.

Miss Marjorie Fay of Wollaston passed her preliminaries at Radcliffe and received an honor in algebra.

Miss Mollie Brown of Willow street, Wollaston has passed her examinations for college and will enter Radcliffe in the fall.

At Merrymount park on Saturday the Norfolk Downs team was defeated by the United States Machine Co. 32 to 24.

Mrs. C. C. Doten.

On Wednesday, funeral services in memory of Mrs. C. C. Doten, wife of Capt. Doten, editor of the Old Colony Standard and president of the Massachusetts Press Association, were held at her residence in Plymouth. There were a large number of relatives and friends present, and the services were held in the presence of the writer of this, from Quincy. Having traveled thousands of miles on several occasions with this noble lady and her beloved husband, on past excursions, he held a kindly feeling toward them and hoped their days would be long and pleasant. But his wish was soon fleeting for several months ago he learned with sorrow that this kind-hearted woman had a tumor and her days would be short, with much pain. Although she suffered quite severely, she bore up bravely, surrounded by her kind and tender husband, children and neighbors, who knew her only too love her.

The casket and floor were covered with fragrant flowers and emblems, and the services were beautiful and touching. A divine from Chicago, who had been drawn closely toward the family in years gone by, when he preached in Plymouth, spoke the sympathetic words, so much appreciated on such occasions, and the services were beautiful and impressive.

Mr. Bowman's Loss.

William Bowman reports that Sunday he was at Perkins park, Brockton, with two friends, through a Sunday paper. He drew out his pocketbook to pay the boy, and that's the last he had seen of it. He thinks that in trying to replace it in his trousers pocket he let it slip down outside the pocket into the park grass.

It was a heavy loss to Mr. Bowman, who is a laborer, employed on the new High school work, and he had been saving the money for four months. The amount was $50.25, and the wallet is one of yellow leather. Mr. Bowman lives at 160 West Elm street at Braintree and came here from Quincy.—Brookline Enterprise.

Bathhouse Contract.

The Park Commissioners have awarded the contract for enlarging the public bathhouse in Ward Two to John E. Poland for $1273. There were two bids received for the work. The other bid was submitted by J. L. Smith whose figures were $1530.

The plans call for building additional wings to both the men's and women's bath, and the building which will double the capacity of the present building. Work enlarging the building will be commenced this week.

QUINCY POINT AND NECK.

Walter Redding and family of Quincy Point have closed their home here and are occupying their summer home in Plymouth.

Marcus Read and family of Washington street have a few days ago for Leominster, N. H.

Poetry.

The Mind Cure.

HARRIOTT WIGBY SHERRATT.

There was a boy I knew of,

Whose clothes were made too small.

His jacket always pinched him,

And it hurt him to walk.

The sleeves were short and narrow,

And the collar was too tight,

And the buttons didn't suit him,

And the pocket wasn't right.

And so, this foolish fellow,

Because his clothes were small,

Was very cross and sulky,

And he would not get at all.

For he said, "My jacket pinches,

And it hurts me to walk.

But a mighty will within;

It'll be big in my opinion.

Can't be bigger than his clothes."

There was a little fellow,

Who was sick, and pale, and thin;

He had a tiny body,

But a mighty will within;

It'll be big in my opinion.

Can't be bigger than his body.

And so, this cheerful courage,

He chased his pain away,

And all the people saw him

Growing heavier day by day.

Till he did care a fig,

But everybody loved him,

Because his soul was big.

Dogs at Constantinople.

We copy the following interesting letter about dogs, written for the

Gardner Journal, by J. S. Lennon at Constantinople:

There are some dogs in this city. I hear they number 800,000. You can go nowhere without seeing them, stumbling over them, dodging them. Is there not some place with no dog? No, not in Constantinople, so far as all places outside of stores, houses, etc., are concerned. I hear there are none in houses.

They all live in the streets, alleys, squares, etc. Look down any street or lane, and count, till your eyes blur, and there are several more dogs. They are on the finest avenues and in splendid public gardens. They stay up too late at night and get up too early in morning. They are not clean, and they are not as good as the dogs of the States of the East. They are not as good as the dogs of the States of the East.

They are not as good as the dogs of the States of the East. They are not

Salem Willows.

The Suburban Press Association held monthly meetings and it was voted at one of them to have three outings during the summer months. In June the party of fifty went to Norumbega park. Their second outing was at Salem Willows last Monday. The members and ladies, about sixty in number, assembled at the North station, Boston, and at 10:55 A. M., in special car attached to regular train, made a flying trip to Salem. Mr. Hall of the B. & M. R. R., accompanied the party and to him the editors are indebted for courtesies.

At Salem a special electric car of the Boston & Northern Street Railway was in waiting and we were soon off for Salem Willows. One of the officials of the railway accompanied the party and pointed out the buildings of interest along the route.

Arriving at Salem Willows the party made a bee line for Chase's hotel where they were served as fine a fish dinner as could be obtained on the New England coast.

After dinner the party separated among the shady willows and to the numerous attractions and finally assembled at a bowling alley where Editor Thorndike's young men defeated Editor Downe's pick-ups 32 to 288.

The management of the theatre at the Willows gave complimentary tickets to the party and the Beverly Transportation Company invited all to a steamboat ride to Baker's island, some six miles. About half of the party enjoyed the cool harbor trip.

The special electric left at 4:45 P. M. for the 5:07 train from Salem, and we arrived home in one hour and forty minutes, which proved that the best way to reach Salem Willows is via B. & M. R. R.

Among the party were Mr. and Mrs. George W. Prescott and Miss Alice K. Prescott of Quincy, and Mr. and Mrs. Eben Prescott of Braintree.

In August the last outing will be held at Plymouth.

Through Cars Sept. 1.

After long and persistent efforts by Mayor Bryant, he is at last able to announce that the necessary railway connection at Neponset, to enable through cars to operate between the Dudley street terminus and Quincy, will be made in about six weeks.

Through cars will then be put on by agreement entered into by the Old Colony street railway and the Boston Elevated Company.

Meat Packers' Strike.

All the big meat packing establishments of the country, where nearly 50,000 workmen are employed, are on a strike ten days ago to enforce certain demands of the union, were thrown open to the strikers yesterday morning and as many of the former employees as could be taken care of were put to work. The majority of the butchers were reinstated, but it will be a long time before all of the strikers will be given employment.

All questions under dispute, the matter of wages, the hiring back of the old help, the retaining of the strike breakers, etc., are submitted to an arbitrating board.

The strike could not have occurred in a more fortunate time for the people. The lesser demand for meat resulting from the hot weather and the good advice that has been spread before the people that meat at this season is not a necessity has had the effect of leaving the market glutted for the time being, and meat both at wholesale and retail is cheaper than before the strike.

Later-Friday 3000 cattle butchers reported at the stockyards for work. Thereupon all refused to work. They reported in a body at their union headquarters. The general order for a renewal of the strike was soon forthcoming.

Good Accommodations.

The travel on the Old Colony Street railway is very heavy this summer, and the patrons are getting good accommodations. There are now 135 trips made each day between Quincy and Neponset. Cars go about every ten minutes throughout the day. The first car leaves for Neponset at 5:40 by way of Hancock street, and the last car at night at 11:35, by way of Wollaston.

There is a fine double track between Quincy and Neponset and most of the cars go by that route, although every half hour by the way of Wollaston; and many times each day by way of Hancock street. The cars to Houghs Neck are so numerous that one can start at almost any hour in the afternoon and find a car ready for the seashore; and a more delightful ride for five cents cannot be found.

Strike at Fall River.

A bad strike is now threatened among the cotton mill operatives at Fall River on Monday next, owing to an announcement of 12 to 12 per cent reduction in wages by the mill owners. It is said that the wages at the present time are low.

The representatives of the companies say that either a curtailment of wages or a complete shutdown is inevitable. The high price paid for cotton and low price received for cloth makes it impracticable to run the mills at a profit without pay. There are some who think a contest at this time to be ill-advised, holding that there is no possibility of chance for the operatives to win, and as the tradesmen have given notice of "no credit," there must be considerable suffering by the families, if the strike continues many weeks.

It is getting to be very dry in this vicinity; more so than at any previous time this season. The laws and pastures that have been green and bright are beginning to get quite yellow. A good heavy rain is much needed.

CITY BRIEFS.

Quincy raised green corn in the market. City Solicitor Blackmur is enjoying a cruise along the coast.

Miss Alice Keith Prescott is the guest of Miss Ethel Bradley at Gloucester.

Carl Christiansen, Q. H. S., '05, has gone to southern California for an indefinite stay.

Our Quincy contractor has commenced work on the government lot on Washington street. W. R. Lofgren is the man and the work he is doing is building a fence about the old cellar.

A Boston paper says Quincy is getting rich because our chauffeurs were fined in the district court. It failed to observe that the arrests were made outside of Quincy. Further, it takes more than small fines to make a city rich.

A petition is being circulated in Quincy which will probably fail many. It is a Democratic move for reciprocity with Canada, but its reference to Republicans may secure some Republican signatures.

James Moorhead of Curtis street sailed Sunday for the Saxon for a two months' visit to Scotland and Ireland. He has not seen his father and native home for 26 years, and an enjoyable reunion is anticipated.

The City Council should do something toward regulating the speed at which automobiles may run. As it is now they are run at a speed to suit the driver and some of them go altogether too fast for safety of pedestrians.

John J. Connors, president of college teamsters union has been elected a delegate to the convention of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to meet in Cincinnati, Ohio. Delegates leave Boston July 28 to be gone two weeks.

Miss Laura Delory, who was accidentally shot on July 4th, at a house on Water street, and has been confined to the hospital ever since, is reported as slowly improving. She is in hopes to be able to leave the hospital about the first of next week.

Bert O. Taylor, who is under arrest at Stamford, Conn., for larceny, has a record in Quincy. His method was to pass himself off as a telephone inspector, thus gaining entrance to houses where he would help himself to any valuables that were handy. This was the same job he worked in Quincy and for which he received a jail sentence. Taylor is also wanted in Englewood, N. J., for the larceny of $3,000 of diamonds.

WEST QUINCY.

Mrs. James F. Burke and baby are spending a few weeks with her people at Central Falls, Rhode Island. Mr. Burke goes down over Sunday each week.

Calvin G. Fletcher of Garfield street has spent a two weeks' business trip to New York.

Miss Jennie Dobie is visiting at Solon, Me.

The granite firm of Tucci & DiBona of Willard street has been dissolved. James Ryan of E. H. Dobie & Co. is on a vacation trip to New York.

Several members of the Copeland club were entertained by Mrs. Alphonse Le Clair Sunday evening. There was music and refreshments.

Arthur H. Dunston of West street is the new clerk at the Quincy post office.

James N. White's horse ran away on Copeland street Sunday morning, but fortunately did little damage. The horse was left alone a minute in front of Coran's store. Down the street was a stone team. The driver saw the horse coming and swung his wagon across the street such a way as to block the street hoping to stop the animal. The horse of the Copeland club was taken to Concord, N. H., on Wednesday for treatment. The services at Concord were conducted by Blazing Star Lodge, A. F. and A. M. of which Mr. Clough was a Past Master. The pair barriers were six Past Masters of the lodge.

Mrs. Lizzie McGonigal and Miss Maud McGonigal are guests of Postmaster Hammond.

The frame of Mayo's new block on Copeland street was raised this week. Our friend John Evans makes no pretence of being a flower writer, but his letters to the Patriot always interest his friends in a probably many others.

One of the late summer weddings will be that of Miss Patty Faxon, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Faxon of Adams street, and Mr. Warren Ogden of Washington, D. C. The date set is early in September.

The excursion committee of the Granite Manufacturers' Association have secured a very low rate to Barre, Vt., and return, getting the round trip for $1.50 from Quincy. The excursion is open to their business friends who wish to see the Green Mountain state for three days.

Among Quincy people at Kearsarge village, which was thrown into commotion Thursday night by fire and burglars, are Miss Josephine Wright, Miss Graves, Mrs. Laura F. Tirrell, Mrs. Jesse F. Curtis and Master William. They are however at the Abbott farm.

The Granite Manufacturers' Association, has this week received an invitation to stop their excursion train to Barre, Vt. at Claremont, N. H., and partake of a free banquet at the Claremont hotel one of the best in the state. New Hampshire will not be outside of Vermont in hospitality.

Mrs. Theodore Farrell and daughter, Miss Theodore Farrell, of Philadelphia, were guests this week of the Misses Prescott, of Spear street, stopping over on their way to Gloucester where they are to spend the summer. They were the steamer and traveling friends last summer in Europe and enjoyed meeting the Quincy party again.

Among the High School graduates in the class of 1904 who have made business connections worthy of note may be mentioned Homer C. Morrison, who was appointed Boston representative of the Quincy Cattle and Horse Company of New York. Mr. Morrison is for the present making his home in Winchester.

Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who has been in prison in London for many years, being found guilty of poisoning her husband, has been discharged this week. The greatest precautions had been taken to keep her movements secret. She crossed from Southampton, and on arriving at Harve took an express train for Rouen, France.

The Democratic state convention has unanimously nominated J. W. Folk, circuit attorney of St. Louis, for governor, and adopted a platform, which promises vigorous unremitting crusade against corruption and boodles in Missouri in the event of Democratic supremacy at the polls. Mr. Folk has done much good work against the boodle the past year.

Preparations on an extensive scale are being made for the fourth annual reunion of the "Alden Kindred of America," which will be held in Pilgrimage church, Plymouth, Thursday, Aug. 18, at 10 A. M.

CASTORIA. Business men and their friends thought that a party to the lake would be a good idea. A party of about thirty people, including the family of Mr. J. W. Folk, left for the lake on Thursday morning. The party was very successful and enjoyed the trip very much. The lake was very beautiful and the scenery was grand. The party returned on Sunday afternoon and were very tired but very happy.

WOLLASTON.

Miss Lillian Dow of Chicago is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. E. C. Dow, Grand View avenue.

Miss Isabelle Louise Albee of Prospect avenue, Wollaston, left Friday for the Berkshires, where she will spend the remainder of the season.

The Quincy Patriot.

Excursion to Vermont.

The offices of the members of the Granite Manufacturers' Association are almost deserted today. Because they have their friends to the number of nearly 200 are on pleasure bent. Business for the time being has been thrown to the wind. This is one of the days that they are not perspiring in their little offices, figuring out how they can cut a monument and make both ends meet.

No sir! no more figuring until Monday! Today their stone dust covered clothes have been laid aside. Gowned in their smooth Sunday clothes they are doing their best. They have gone to see how they do it there.

Their little vacation trip has been well earned. For nearly 365 days each year and from 12 to 14 hours each day, their time is devoted to business. Today, Saturday and Sunday, there will be no minimum, maximum or average. Time enough to settle that cold weather comes.

A year ago in response to an invitation the Barre granite men came to Quincy. They visited the cutting plants and quarries, getting what they could. Had their eyes opened at the immensity of the granite. For the River Ship and Engine Co. They saw a special train draw them to Crescent Park still remaining green in their memory. They filled up with a clam bake, shot the chutes, topped the loop, and took a swim in the briny deep. Things went quick and fast. All too soon it was over and away they went back to Vermont fully convinced that there were no flies on the Quincy men.

This year the tables are turned and here is going to do unto Quincy as Quincy did unto them. Make things pleasant for them. There have been many rumors as to what was in store for the Quincyites, but the Barre men have not fully divulged their plans. It is said, however, that today they will stuff the Quincy men with roast ox and all "the fixin's." But more of that later.

The Ledger's war correspondent will be kept informed of what's doing. The party left Quincy Thursday at 9:12 P. M. At 10:30 o'clock with all aboard for Barre, they started. The Quincy men were pulled out of the North Union station.

Some of the party were installed in sleeping cars and others preferred to sleep in the ordinary seats. At midnight they were rushing along through space, and yesterday they awoke in Vermont; that is those fortunate enough to get any sleep. The Ledger expects to print today a list of the excursionists, and also a letter from our special correspondent. That the visiting granite men will be royally entertained is shown by the following which appeared in the Barre, Vt., Times, Tuesday.

"During the latter part of the present week Barre will have an opportunity to pay back, in a measure, the compliment paid by Quincy when the granite manufacturers of this city were invited to the Massachusetts city and royal visit."

The local committee of the city has arranged an attractive programme for the enjoyment of the visiting business men, which will contain for the principal features trips to the cutting plants of the city, an excursion to the quarries, an immense barbecue and smaller occasions which will add to the enjoyment of the visit. It is suggested that the various clubs of the city extend an "open house" invitation to the visitors. Vincilia club has already extended that invitation and the Quincy men will be made as much at home as possible there. Such details as these, although slight in and of themselves, will be appreciated by the visiting granite men.

"Let Barre be a hearty welcome extended to the visitors."

Killed by Assassin.

M. von Plehve, minister of the interior, and admitted to be the greatest statesman in Russia was blown to pieces on Thursday morning while on his way to Petrohof to make report to the Emperor.

His life had long been threatened, consequently, care had been taken to protect his movements. The unfortunate minister had reached a point within a minute's drive of the Baltic station, when a tall, pale, youngish, bearded individual rushed out of a beer house, and with great force and precision, hurled a bomb upon the statesman exactly under M. von Plehve's carriage.

The detonation was terrible and the concussion was such that all the windows of houses were broken within 100 yards. Out of the dense smoke could be seen black objects being hurled upward. When the smoke cleared nothing remained but the wheels, springs, frame, pole and a few fragments of the woodwork of the carriage. The unfortunate minister was literally blown to pieces. His entire face had disappeared. The coachman and likewise the horses were dead.

"Lying on the ground was the assassin, wounded in the stomach by pieces of the bomb. He and an associate, who had given a signal on the arrival of the minister, were arrested. Five other people were hurt."

Strike at Fall River.

The immense strike by the operatives in the cotton mill at Fall River still continues and it is said neither side is weakening. The whole country is appealed to for help, but the more aid they get the longer will be the strike, and the more suffering there will be. It will not be the day laborer, nor the mill owners; it will be the owners of the mills who have plenty to eat and to wear, and can make up their losses when the mills start, but the poor families, who live from hand to mouth will be the ones to get hungry and suffer for the necessities of life. Why are such strikes permitted? Many families of French-Canadians are leaving the city, which is a wise act on their part.

Went Up Two Flights.

A horse belonging to Cobb-Eastman Co. was led from a blacksmith's shop to the street, with his harness on, and while left a moment went up a long flight of stairs to the fourth floor of the building, on Wednesday to the paper box factory of Cheney & Co. Although he went up quickly and frightened hundreds of girls and employees as he rushed in to the room, it took a half dozen men an hour to get him to the street again.

The gathering of the members of the Woman's Relief Corps on Wednesday at the residence of Mrs. William A. Field at Holbrook, one of the members, was an enjoyable event.

Miss Gertrude Babcock of Presidents hill is camping for a week in a cabin, with Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Hatch of Newton and Misses Mary and Margaret Gannett of Milton.

Miss Morgan who has been visiting Miss Leash of Hancock street returned to Amherst, Mass., this morning. Miss Morgan was most enthusiastic over historical Quincy and Boston suburbs.

The annual outing of the Grocers' Association will be held next Wednesday at Rocky Point. This is the same place that the grocers went a year ago and they so enjoyed a time that they will repeat it this year.

Miss Constance Herford of Germany who is spending some time in Quincy and who is now with her friend, Miss Clavin, at Gloucester, leaves the first of August for a tour of the White Mountains, the St. Lawrence river and Niagara Falls.

The cases against Thomas Grignon, the young fellow who is alleged was the party who held up women on New Bedford, came up for hearing Thursday morning in the district court. After the hearing the court continued the cases for judgment until Aug. 27.

Many regret that the old, historic church, the First church, is to be closed until September. It would seem as though this church should never close. We would not deprive the pastor of a vacation, however, but would suggest substitutes each Sunday as is done in other churches.

Contract Awarded.
Commissioner Knowlton opened bids Monday for a new heating system, including all expenses of change, at the Willard schoolhouse, for which $10, 000 was appropriated by the City Council.
They were as follows:
A. A. Sanborn, $19,740
Badger Bros., 10,763
Albert B. Franklin, 9,000
Walter B. Ross, 8,500
All the estimates except that of Mr.
Franklin are on the same plan.
Commissioner Knowlton has awarded the contract to W. B. Ross for $8,500.
This was the lowest of the four bids received. The contract is awarded with provision that the lay out meet the approval of the State Police.
Commissioner Knowlton showed the four sets of plans for the lay out to the State Police on Tuesday, and at that time it was decided that the Ross lay out was the best. The system to be installed is a gravity system.
Mr. Ross was the man who secured the contract for heating the new Washington school, and installing the heating system there perfectly giving the best of satisfaction and is by far the best lay out of any school building in the city. Work installing the system at the Willard school will be commenced at once.
Expert Rescuer.
There was a lively runaway on Washington street Tuesday afternoon. The horse was one of Angus McDonald's.
It was about 1 o'clock when the horse
came out of Mill street on the run, minus a driver, and dashed down
Washington street toward Quincy Point.
Arthur Dunn was near the corner of Mill street and when he saw the animal running, he started to run in the same direction. As the horse passed him he leaped over the tailboard into the wagon. Unfortunately the reins had fallen to the ground and it was with difficulty that he was able to recover them. Once he had the reins in his hands he soon stopped the frightened horse. It is the third sensational capture of runaway horses that Dunn has made recently and he is getting quite a reputation in that line.
Fletcher Family Union.
The next meeting of the Fletcher
Family Union will be held at Tremont
Temple, Boston, Wednesday, Aug. 21.
The next day a trip will be made to Salem, with a clam bake at the Salem Willows. At the Boston meeting, prominent members will make addresses and there will be vocal and instrumental music. A dinner will be served in the banquet hall at 12.30.
On the second day the historic places of Salem will be visited. Mr. George A.
Fletcher of Milton is on the executive committee and Austin B. Fletcher, L.L.
D., of New York is president.
Court Vacation.
The district court of Quincy will take a vacation as far as civil business is concerned until September, the court having given notice that no action shall be placed on the trial list without leave of the court until August 29th.
Chapter 181 of the Revised Laws
from July 25 to Sept. 5 all motions will be heard and trials commenced on Tuesdays at 9.30 unless the court ordered otherwise.

Notes and Comments.
The maiden alderman has not taken
a vacation. They are considering
school problems, one of which is the enlargement of the High school.
When the last G. A. R. National Encampment met in Boston it was the pleasure of Paul Bevere Post of this city to entertain a visiting post from New York. It would be a pleasure to have a distant post as guests this year.
Here's hoping that the Quincy granite manufacturers may have pleasant and
comfortable weather while in Vermont.
They have certainly earned a few days'
vacation, and it should have been extended to a week.
Everett, which is pushing Quincy for proceeding in population, has pushed
ahead in tax rate. It is $18.20 this year
an increase of $1.20. Quincy is willing
it should go ahead in this respect, but does not yield her a large population
even though the State Board of Health
so estimates.
The suggestion of the Daily Ledger
to make City Square, Quincy, the terminus of all car routes, and run frequent
cars between there and the Dudley Street
terminal of the Boston Elevated meets
with favor not only among the Quincy
people, but among some of the railway men.
If this plan was adopted the operation
of the cars would be facilitated by two
loops around the Stone Church in City
Square. The inner one with a few switches as possible, for the exclusive use of the Boston Elevated. The outer loop for the use of all other routes. There could be two connections between the two loops, that Boston cars could go to
any route or vice versa.
Thus the cars from Boston would
come on Hancock street as far as Temple street, and return through Temple
and Washington streets without delay
and without changing trolleys or seats.
The cars from East Milton, Brockton
and Weymouth Landing would come to Temple street and thence take the outer
loop through Temple and Washington streets and return by Hancock street
direct.
The cars from East Weymouth and Nantasket would come direct to Hancock street, (the former going to the depot as at present) and returning
through Temple street.
The cars from the Stone Neck would go
to Temple street at present but return
through Temple street.
Of course it would be necessary to
have a new layout of tracks and switches
around the church, and short double
tracks would be desirable on Hancock
street to Granite street, to Washington street, and to the Stone Neck, or even Bainbridge and Chestnut streets--Rev. E. S.

experience meeting. Reading room open Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons from 3 to 5 P. M. Let the students and gentlemen in attendance. All are welcome.

Notes and Comments.
The maiden alderman has not taken
school problems, one of which is the
enlargement of the High school.
When the last G. A. R. National Encampment met in Boston it was the pleasure of Paul Bevere Post of this city to entertain a visiting post from
New York. It would be a pleasure to
have a distant post as guests this year.
Here's hoping that the Quincy granite
manufacturers may have pleasant and
comfortable weather while in Vermont.
They have certainly earned a few days'
vacation, and it should have been extended to a week.
Everett, which is pushing Quincy for
proceeding in population, has pushed
an increase of $1.20. Quincy is willing
it should go ahead in this respect, but
does not yield her a large population
even though the State Board of Health
so estimates.
The suggestion of the Daily Ledger
to make City Square, Quincy, the terminus of all car routes, and run frequent
cars between there and the Dudley Street
terminal of the Boston Elevated meets
people, but among some of the
railway men.
If this plan was adopted the operation
of the cars would be facilitated by two
loops around the Stone Church in City
switches as possible, for the exclusive
use of the Boston Elevated. The outer
loop for the use of all other routes. There could be two connections between the
two loops, that Boston cars could go to
any route or vice versa.
Thus the cars from Boston would
come on Hancock street as far as Temple street, and return through Temple
and Washington streets without delay
The cars from East Milton, Brockton
and Weymouth Landing would come to Temple street and thence take the outer
loop through Temple and Washington
streets and return by Hancock street
direct.
The cars from East Weymouth and Nantasket would come direct to Han-
cock street, (the former going to the depot as at present) and returning
through Temple street.
The cars from the Stone Neck would go
to Temple street at present but return
through Temple street.
Of course it would be necessary to
have a new layout of tracks and switches
around the church, and short double
tracks would be desirable on Hancock
street to Granite street, to Washington
street, and to the Stone Neck, or even Bainbridge and Chestnut streets--Rev. E. S.
Hardy, pastor, Morning service at 10.30, evening service at 7.30. All are welcome.

Through Cars to Bton.
A large gang of men were work all day Sunday putting in the art piece of track which connects the Quincy line of the street railway with Boston Elevated system. The overall work has been run and the line is now ready for use.
This connecting link there means much to Quincy people, for not only will it serve to bring other people to Quincy but it will make it possible for Quincy people to arrange special trolley trips in special cars to points north of Boston.
This link complete it is possible to ride to the north end of Boston as Lowell or Nashua, N. H., and as far west as Worcester Springfield or Greenfield.
Just which line of cars will take the regular trips between Quincy and the dudley street terminal has not been announced as yet, but the Quincy people suggest that five minute service be established between City Square, Quincy, and Dudley street, and that Quincy instead of Neponset home the place for a change of cars will be necessary.
The Living Flag
Next to the G. A. R. men in point of interest at the grand parade of the Grand Army in Boston, next month, will be the living flag composed of 2000
boys and girls. They have been divided into two sections of 1000 each for rehearsals until Tuesday afternoon when they were all brought together in the exhibition hall of the English high school. The public and parochial schools of Boston, Cambridge, Chelsea, Brookline, Somerville and Winthrop were represented.
Each section has been assigned its own music, so that one set of patriotic songs will be going on in the rear of the other by section B. The songs which section A will sing are "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Hail Columbia," "The Star Spangled Banner,"
"Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," and "America." Section B will sing
"Sweet Old Republic," "Dixie's Land,"
"Freedom's Land," "America,"
"The Star Spangled Banner."
When the children are grouped for the parade they will be dressed and formed to represent a large American flag which will be a truly beautiful sight.
Agro--Keenan.
Two popular Quincy young people were united in marriage Wednesday at 11 past noon, by Rev. J. J. Con-at St. John's church. They were Edward Stephen Agro, son of Mr. James Agro of 67 Hodge avenue, Atlantic, and Miss Annie Stella Keenan, daughter of Mrs. Hannah Keenan of 235 South street, and a popular teacher until recently at the Cranich school.
The ceremony was performed by Mr. Mary C.
Agro of Atlantic, and the best man was William H. Keenan of Quincy. There were four ushers, John J. Baron of Somerville, James A. Agro of Atlantic, William A. Carey of Quincy and Harry Walsh of Brookline.
A delicious repast, rumored with lace, added to the charms of the bride, while the maid of honor was also charming in a gown of blue silk, trimmed with chiffon.
Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, Mrs. Keenan.
Mr. and Mrs. Agro left for Maine where they are to spend two weeks and on their return are to reside in Quincy.
Conference Unsatisfactory.
The conference Monday between committees of the employees of the Quincy and Brockton divisions of the street railway with the officials to arrange terms of agreement for the coming year was not entirely satisfactory.
The committee reported back to the Unions that night and it is reported that some of the men were not to attend a strike. The cooler heads of the officers of the union however prevailed.
The Quincy division was instructed for another conference immediately.
Just when this will be held is not known. It has been arranged however that after this conference a meeting of the night men will be held at 8.30 A.
M. and of the day men at 8 P. M. to consider the report of the committee.
The bone of contention between the railway and the union is said to be the second clause in the agreement which is the recognition of the union.

Gov. Bates Busy.

State House, Aug. 5. Representative Freeman was at the State House this morning charged by vote of the Young Men's Christian Association of Quincy to deliver to Gov. Bates an invitation to him to be present at the laying of the corner stone of the new building of the association sometime next month. The date was left open in order that the association might accommodate itself to the demands upon the Governor's time, and so be sure and have him present.

Representative Freeman waited a long time for opportunity to speak with the Governor. But the Council was in session and of course the Governor has to be present at that and could not come out. It is not to be supposed that he was even informed that Mr. Freeman was waiting to see him. Then, too, many other persons were waiting. Finally Private Secretary Hurlbut told Mr. Freeman that, instead of waiting longer, it would be better for him to return home and to send the invitation in writing, thus saving his own time and accomplishing his purpose just as well. Accordingly that will be the course taken.

Since Representative Freeman was here it has been learned at the executive department that Gov. Bates will be away most of the month of September and it will not be possible for him to visit Quincy before the latter part of the month. On September 17, the Governor and party will leave for Manassas, Va., where the militia from the different states will be in camp, and where our own second brigade will be sent. This is a very unusual occurrence and the presence of the Governor is desired.

Thence the Governor and party will go to St. Louis in order to be present at the official celebration of "Massachusetts day." The regular, official celebration, aside from the Governor and those with him, will leave Boston September 12 and will not return for some ten days. The official reception will occur Saturday, September 17, at which a speech will be made by the Governor and another by President Harris of Amherst college, the chairman of the Exposition Commissioners on the part of Massachusetts.

As the Governor will not be here to see the Quincy people, it is probable that he can see what chance they have of getting him to speak in September, remembering that he is always in brisk demand.

Big Bunco Bubble.

On Thursday afternoon United States Deputy Marshals Ruhl and Waters visited the office of the North American Trust, at 144 Tremont street, Boston, and placed under arrest John Marshall Barry and Francis Webster, officers of the concern, on the charge of conspiracy to defraud.

Through the operation of a system which the federal officers claim eludes even the methods of the Jernegan sea water gold company, or the 520 cent Miller scheme, the North American Trust is alleged to have duped people in all parts of the country, not only in Boston and vicinity, but in all the large cities of New England as well.

Organized hardly three months ago, the scheme must have proven an immensely profitable one. Several Boston offices were opened, branches have been established in Lynn, Dorchester, New Bedford, Leominster, Salem, Lowell, Haverhill, Providence, Worcester, Fall River, Portland, Me., and elsewhere.

It is said that quite a number of Quincy people had money in the North American Trust Co. of Boston, whose business was wound up Thursday.

Mrs. Hanna Gives $10,000.

Ten thousand dollars, the largest contribution ever given to a political party for campaign purposes by a woman, has been given by Mrs. Mark Hanna, wife of the late Senator Mark Hanna, to the Republican party for use in the coming presidential campaign.

Mrs. Hanna's interest in the Republican party is almost as keen as was that of her late husband. Through his life-long association with the party he became cognizant of every detail of the workings of politics, and many times he confided in Mrs. Hanna. She joined with him in his enthusiasm for the party and her contribution to the national campaign fund is made from personal interest, as well as in perpetuation of her husband's influence as a politician.

Paul Revere Post to Parade.

Paul Revere Post No. 8, G. A. R., has not received orders from State headquarters as yet, regarding the Grand Army encampment, so that definite plans cannot be made.

Plans however were outlined at the meeting of the Post Thursday evening. The Post will take part in the parade in Boston on Tuesday, the 10th, and will be accompanied by the Brintree Fife and Drum Corps of 19 pieces.

They will leave Quincy on the 8.42 train that morning.

Arrangements will be made if possible to secure seats on the grand stand for the companies who are unable to march.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—In a statement given out tonight by the packers, the report that negotiations are in progress to bring about another conference between the packers and the labor leaders is declared to be entirely unfounded.

The packers assert that there is not the slightest possibility of further conferences with the strike leaders. According to this statement the progress being made at the plants is satisfactory.

Employed daily; all contracts and current orders are being made at lower prices than before the strike commenced.

In a table accompanying the statement it is shown that the total number of men at work tonight at all points is more than 20,000.—Boston Post.

A party of four in an automobile were held up last Wednesday night on Old Quarry road near Willow Grove, a report about 14 miles from Philadelphia. The highwayman secured $100 in money and jewelry. The victims of the robbery were A. C. Hall, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Arthur L. Jackson and Mrs. Thomas C. Walton, all of New York. They were en route to the Delaware Watergap. The highwayman road a motor cycle. He disabled Mr. Hall's automobile, and, after having been heavily armed, he was compelled to walk two miles to a toll gate.

NOTICE.
To my Friends and Public generally:
Having associated myself with Mr. W. G. Shaw, in his new store in City Square, would be pleased to see you and show you a nice and large line of HOUSEHOLD FURNISHINGS. Having had a long experience and with the Grand Assortment of Goods at my command, I feel confident of pleasing you.

Thankful for past favors and hoping for a continuance of the same,
I am very truly yours,

Poetry.

Retrospect.

I visited to-day my old-time home,
Of childhood's hopes and fears the long closed
time;
And memory thronged the leaves, that I might pore O'er pictures limned, when first I trod life's shore.

The flowing brook that seemed to deep and grand
When first I tried to swim from 'sland to strand;
The hill down which I slid in winter days,
And clasped its height with everything sublime.

The village store, the scene of all my wealth,
Old Doctor G., companion of health,
And Quire D., the justice, ponderous, slow,
My insurrection of the verb to know.

In later years, grand rivers seemed quite small,
And snow-capped mountains not so very tall,
While men and wealth I gauged with accurate eyes,
My childhood's idols kept pristine size.

But now, to-day, I almost seem to mock,
And sense of a zeal and worth received a shock
To find the idle of a former day
Were either small or else of common clay.

Thus pleasure, wealth, and station, all are small,
When we have scaled the once dividing wall,
And little deem we worthy to be gained,
Except what seems too far to attain.

I almost wish I had not opened the book,
Not waked youth's echoes in that quiet nook,
But heeding past joys' ghosts, whet springs of tears,
Had used the flattering lens of vanished years.

As sun and moon when setting seemed more grand,
Than when directly over head they stand,
So men, their deeds and joys are grander
classical
When on the dim horizon of the past.

HER FATHER'S WIFE.

"Isn't it a lovely face?" she said,
And with a look and a lingering touch of affection, she laid down the small bit of pasteboard on the rustic table
before her.

They were sitting on the vicarage veranda, their eyes on the still evening beyond. The old man—her father's latest curate, just arrived, a pensive gray cleric, with the dust of life's journey upon him, the old man roused himself by an effort from the depths of his deep wicker chair.

"Yes," he said, "yes," his long gaze still heavy on the broadly shadowed meadows, that sank to the twinkling requirements of courtesy, he clasped at the photograph with his shivering claw. "A lovely face," he repeated, holding the thing close to his short-sighted eyes. "Any relation?" He dropped the card back on the table,
only an inch or two, but he resisted the swiftness of its descent. He did not notice it; he was not particularly interested. The world had been rough to him, and the thoughts that he cared to think were few.

"She was my mother," said the vicar's daughter. The girl being young and happy, the old man's pallid sadness and the vicar's curate, the vicar's her placid recollection hitherto seemed unaccountably alike. They had always said the same thing; they had always looked prepared to say it. They had always been youthful to the extreme of callow smoothness; there had never been anything about them that was not their curate'ship.

"She was my mother," said Lillas,
with impulsive demand for sympathy.
"I never speak of her to strangers. I can't imagine what makes me show you the photograph."

"You could not well help yourself; I was close to you before you were aware. I fear that I intruded." The old man's manner had changed from listless to anxious—his usual change.

"Oh, no; you see it happens to be my birthday and I had brought out this photo to put into the new frame I gave father. He doesn't like you go in for woodcarving? Don't you think this is rather good? Please say so; I've taken a lot of trouble over it."

"It is perfectly beautiful," he said;
"I can't imagine how human fingers can do anything so clever. Why, I can't imagine a painter's pen."

"I'm afraid you must think me very helpless. What is worse, I'm afraid I am helpless. I have been accustomed to being looked after all my life—till last week the tone of his voice preceded further inquiry."

"So this was your mother," he said,
once more lifting the card and gazing at it intently. His manner had changed altogether; something of the sun behind every man's face had crept through the film of his eyes.

"I will tell you all about her," she said swiftly. "There isn't much to tell.
She died when I was four years old.
Father was quite broken-hearted. He was a cavalry officer, you know, in the Seventh Hussars. A couple of years later he threw it all up, as he says, and entered the church. He bought this out-of-the-way living in Ireland. We have always lived here together since, he and I."

"Quite alone?"
"Quite alone, with a couple of Irish servants. You like the people here when you get to know them. You can't think what a delicious place this is, the lovely country, the lovely children! Oh!" She stopped suddenly.

"I forgot."
He gazed at her curiously. "What is it?"
"The curate has been always fond of soil," she said, dropping her eyelids demurely. "I can't think why. Whatever the faults of the people may be they are always seen to me entirely amusing."

"You had life very cheerful," he answered in weary tones. "You have had a good time, it appears, hitherto."
"Of course, I have, with father. I'm as happy as the day is long. You can't imagine how good father has always been to me. I've learned all I know from father. Riting, and history, and French. But I've swept her hand energetically across the table. "To the dull all things are dull," says father."

"Is not that rather hard on the curates?"
She laughed, but before she could hit on an answer, "I have never found life dull," he said, "not that."

The words fell like a great blackness on the landscape.

Lillas broke the grim silence, speak- ing softly.

"Father has had a lot of trouble, too,
you see, and people who don't know him will think him rather fat and stupid.
But that was only when he was sitting by himself, and thinking, and didn't know I was anywhere near. I used to imagine then his face was like the king
in my history book—you remember, the king who never smiled again. But you should hear father about with laughter! What rumps we had, father and I!"

"You are right," he burst out vehemently. "Nobody need be unhappy who lives with a creature he loves." She took up the frame and began filling it.

"And I who pitied you! Pitied you from the bottom of my heart!" he went on.

"Me? Why?"
"Because you had never known a mother's love."

Lillas laid down the frame in her lap
and looked up thoughtfully. "Yes," she said slowly, "that is what people say, 'Never known a mother's love.' I often think of it and try to understand it. And I see that it is very different. But you know, I don't quite realize how dreadful it is, all exactly why. I remember nothing of mother, except vaguely—that must be a fancy! Father says it is a fancy.
I know all about her!" she exclaimed.

As sun and moon when setting seemed more grand,
Than when directly over head they stand,
classical
When on the dim horizon of the past.

Mellen Mirror.

"Father has told me all about her. I know better, perhaps, through telling than if I had lived with her. She was an angel, an angel of pity and kindness to the poor, and compassionate.
Father has always said how good she was to everybody. As a child I used to ask him often to tell of her. Somehow we speak less of her—hardly ever.
I am grown up."

"Mine has been a very unimportant life," said the curate; his still eyes settled on the far gray hill, "but, when I look back on it, that is what people to have filled it. She died last year."

Lillas answered nothing.
"You thought my story would be more interesting? No it isn't interesting at all."

"I think it is," she said gently.
"You must tell me about her some day."

"Not now. Not yet. Besides, there is nothing to tell. Just a quiet, hard-working, existence—poverty, poverty,
stricken, righteous from end to end, Eighty-seven years of doing one's duty and loving God."

"I am sorry for you," said Lillas, gazing straitly at him, "but I cannot share your view of her. She was a happy and happy to retain her fortune
and her truth. All that is left
now is just enough to keep us here. I cannot beggar her. Have some pity.
Remember. And, besides, it would be useless. There is no more. I swear it.
—There is no more—there is no more."

He sealed up the letter, put it in his breast pocket, and went to his room.
The post-lady's daily agony—during all these years—the post.

On the stairs he already met the housemaid coming up. He took what she was bringing and leaped back into his den with it. He tore it open.

"What nonsense!" he said here, let us understand each other. Are you going to send me that thousand, or are you not? Because if not, so much the worse for you. I intend to have it.
I simply must have it. Mean old thing!
We all know what to believe about your poverty. As if you were not your parishioners and their friends for miles around call you the miser!

The very name I should have chosen for you—the Miser! So open your money bags or we shall see what we shall see!"

A postscript was added. "For heaven's sake, leave that girl out of your letters. Once for all—for the hundredth time—I don't care a brass farthing about her happiness. She is comfortable enough, I do not doubt;
and if she weren't, it would not matter
to me."

When he came to this postscript the vicar gave a low gasp. His jaw stiffened and a couple of gray veins swelled out of shape on his forehead.
"She has never said that before," he whispered hoarsely, and, by heavens,
she means it!"

In another moment he had turned eagerly, and with swift, uncertain clutches was tearing out the contents of the safe in confusion on the floor.
Fell-mell the whole lot came tumbling out. He stood breathless, looking from the empty iron cupboard to the chaos
in front of him.

Then he dragged to him a whole collection to a stone tray in the wall and flung lighted matches upon it. The ball dress flared up at once, enveloping the other things in curling flames and yellow flames.
There was no outlet to the cavity.
Clouds of smoke came rolling forward into the room.

The vicar stepped aside, coughing.
He kicked a bundle or two of letters
into the burning mass.

"Fool that I was!" he repeated half dozen times. "Fool that I was!"
There was anger in his voice and a measure of sadness, but no exaggeration of self-reproach, for he knew that it is man's fate to be a fool. The bad man is a fool—is not all evil foolishness? And the good man is a fool because, sooner or later a woman makes him such.

To love women wisely is the bad man's gift. The good man can only love them too well.

The charred mass crackled against the gray stone wall. In the room the atmosphere was stifling. The vicar went to open the window.

Then he sat down to write a second reply, faster still than the first, without pausing to think. He used the Greek alphabet in writing; some sort of protection he had insisted on against the prying of servants and the possible indications of the widow who kept the village post office.

"I cannot help it," he wrote, "I must not leave it to me. Do your worst, you know the penalty. On the day when you divulge our secret my solicitors stop your monthly allowance of £100. I cannot give you more.
It is twice as much as I spend upon it."
He hesitated one moment, his pen poised in air—"my daughter and my self,"—Herbert Thring.—Maarten Martens.

In silence he pursued his way to the top of the house, to the little "gable room," where he locked himself in.

"The 'gable room,'" as they called it, was the unusual circumstance of the tranquil life of the vicarage. The master of the house kept the key of this out-of-the-way corner. On the rare occasions when a servant was admitted to clean it the room was found to contain nothing but a common chair,
a table, and an immense iron safe.

This latter, of course, as all the guests and all the paucity for miles around understood, was piled up and heavily loaded with masses of gold.

"And diamonds," said the girls.
It was known that the vicar had always been wealthy, rich man's only son. Since he had come over to the western wilds from his home in Yorkshire city, he had lived simply, and not poorly, giving with generosity, but not with extravagance, to all around him, for all were necessities. Therefore,
although like most other qualities, manly and sympathetic, he bore the worst reproach of a person, that of avarice. Men openly called him
"miser," with unwilling respect for the hoard in the "gable room." His own daughter knew little about money and cared little for it. She believed in her father implicitly, in his motives as all others. The locked room under the roof was his little sanctuary where he could hide from the importunate and compose his beautiful sermons.

The vicar bolted the door and stood facing the safe. There were objects of female apparel, a couple of boxes, a might have hidden them, a big faded bouquet, bundles of letters, one or two cases, probably holding some pieces of jewelry and odds and ends such as might be swept together from any woman's chest of drawers.

"What is it for the letters," said
the vicar, "I should have destroyed those." But he had said it so often,
and yet doubted if he meant the words.
He drew out one envelope that lay
by itself, as it recently placed there.
And, indeed, it bore the arrival postmark of that morning. He opened the letter slowly, his countenance darkening
in the dusk.

Then he laid it down before him on the table and with shaking fingers began to write rapidly.

"I cannot," he said, "I cannot. What ask is impossible. I should have to do as you know from the past. Only two will! Cannot you understand? I have ruined myself, ruined my child. You have taken our money; her money. So be it. Let it go. Better she should be poor and happy than retain her fortune
and her truth. All that is left
now is just enough to keep us here. I cannot beggar her. Have some pity.
Remember. And, besides, it would be useless. There is no more. I swear it.
—There is no more—there is no more."

Public Library.

There has lately been added to the library, as a gift from one of our citizens, a work on Japan and its history, history and literature, published by the J. B. Millet Co., of Boston, in twelve volumes, in what is termed its "Original Series."

In view of the epoch-making struggle now going on in the Far East, this work has an interest and value above the large number of books upon Japan brought out at this season, many of them hastily prepared for the purpose of making them available for a market occasioned by the war. Its author, Capt. Francis Brinkley, has lived most of the time for the past thirty years in Japan, occupying the position of editor of a prominent newspaper there, and being in close touch with the leading people of the country. His work was in process of publication before the war broke out, hence there are no hasty speculations concerning future events, but both as regards China and Japan, conditions are stated in a manner which the reader to form conclusions of his own. And it seems no better basis of judgment could be found than that afforded by Capt. Brinkley's work. He thoroughly appreciates the merits of the Japanese and the Chinese, both individually and collectively, and is by no means blind to the defects and faults of each race in the citizens of both nations.

It therefore seems that our citizens of intelligence could find no better work to which to devote their attention at this time than the books of Capt. Brinkley's series, thus showing their appreciation of the value of the library's valuable gift. These volumes have been produced in exceedingly attractive form, the many beautiful illustrations thoroughly in keeping with the letter text. It is an Artists' edition limited to five hundred numbered and registered copies of which this is number 246.

North American Trust Co.

President J. M. Barry, F. C. Webster and C. A. Record, the principals in the North American Trust case, with a formidable array of legal talent and a half a cart load of books and office impediments, were again before Commissioner Fiske on Thursday. It appeared from evidence that the company had no capital, but paid dividends from money paid in.

The trust received in cash on account of the purchase fund between April 9 and June 24, $6,474. The total disbursement for the same period was $5,800, leaving a cash balance of $674 on hand June 24. The face value of contracts written between the two dates as shown by the books was $750,000, $200,000 being for purchase of real estate, and the remainder for real estate.

It seems that too severe a punishment cannot be given to men engaged in cheating the poor out of their funds. It looks as though many thousands of persons had been victimized by this trust company.

The Fall River Strike.

There is a growing dissatisfaction among the operators of the mills at Fall River and many are anxious to return to work. There has been much suffering among those having large families. Relief to the non-union men has not been satisfactory, and they are ready to be said to go back to work as soon as possible. The mill trustees are, on the other hand, ready to say how magnanimous they will be in opening the gates. They want to be sure of the situation first.

It looks very much, however, as if they could have the bulk of their operatives back, whenever the latter are wanted.

Afternoon Fire.

The alarm from box 27 at 4.50 Thursday afternoon called the department to a lively blaze on Elm place in the barn occupied by Elmer W. Newcomb and connected with his house. When the department arrived the building was burning fiercely, and the flames and smoke were pouring from it in such volumes that it looked as though the building would be destroyed.

Well directed streams of water, however, soon put the blaze out, but before the interior of the building had been badly burned. Chief Williams estimates the loss at $300. The fire is thought to have been caused by child playing with matches.

From 20 to 40 pigeons lost their lives, but otherwise there was very little in the barn. The estate is owned by the heirs of the late Joseph G. Brackett.

S. Y. C. Ladies' Day.

Entrancing music by Peters' orchestra, a review of the day in the bay, singing water sports, lunch, and dancing in the evening, are the good things arranged by the house committee of the Squantum Yacht club for its annual ladies' day today. Owing to the lateness of the tide the review and the water sports will not start until 2.30. Those who do not care to sail can enjoy the music on the verandas of the club house.

In New York on Wednesday, for the purpose of establishing a test, power was turned on the new electric trolley and electric trains were run over the line from down town stations to Harlem. The climax of the test was made by a picked crew with four cars run at high speed over the entire route. The experiment was a complete success, and Harlem was reached well within the time allowance of 15 minutes from the city hall.

It was fourteen years ago yesterday, Aug. 10, 1890, that the terrible railroad accident occurred just west of the Diamond street bridge in this city. Several were killed and many injured, through the carelessness of workmen employed in repairing the track.

There has been a big cut in first and second class fares to Europe this week. It is possible now to go across the Atlantic first-class on the new liner, the $30 from the usual fare, and second-class for $30, which is $10 less than the rate before the cut.

Arthur H. Peterson and Kenneth McKean, two Quincy boys have accepted positions in Chicago and left for New York on Tuesday. Mr. McKean will be associated with the U. S. Express Co., and Mr. Peterson has accepted the position as secretary to J. R. Peckham, Jr., Vice President of Chicago American Baseball Team.

Henry L. Leet, 15 years old, of 81 Brackett street proved a hero Monday afternoon. Finding that a brackett wharf he saved Antonio Rignoglio, 20 years, an Italian, from drowning. He was going down the second time. Swimming out to him Leet caught hold of him and swam for shore. The Italian clung on to him and almost pulled him down. A man who was near helped both out.

It is estimated that one hundred thousand persons viewed the Charles River carnival at Waltham on Wednesday. With mid scenes of grandeur and beauty only seen occasionally in a lifetime, the G. A. R. visitors were entertained.

UNCLE SAM.

Between 1890 and 1903 Uncle Sam increased the sale of his public lands from $1,005,000 to $8,296,000, a cash gain of $7,291,000 in one year, besides creating more homes and farms for his family.

UNDER PROTECTION.

Notes and Comments.

That Quincy is a healthy city is borne out by the fact that not a case of contagious disease has been reported to the Board of Health since July 18. This speaks well for a city of 30,000 population. There have been very few deaths since Aug. 1.

THE FESTIVITIES OF G. A. R. WEEK are saddened by the unfavorable news from the bedside of Senator Hoar. The senior Massachusetts senator has long been held in high esteem not only by his constituents but by the nation at large, and he has done much to maintain the prestige of the old Bay State.

Some papers in Germany think President Roosevelt's demonstration against Turkey was for the purpose of catching the "missionary vote." Undoubtedly there are 2,000,000 missionaries in America anxious to go in and convert Turkey. But thus far shotguns cannot be used in the field, and the most effective when dealing with the sultan of the Prophet.

The third battle of Bull Run, which is to be fought next September, will cost $1,500,000. Already troops are on the march from Ethan Allen in Vermont. They will have a 700-mile tramp. One thousand horses will be taken to the field; there will be thirty eight ambulances; and six escort wagons. The boys all over the Union are enthusiastic at the prospect of fighting on the same field where their fathers fought and bled more than forty years ago. It is expected that a vast crowd of spectators will witness the mock campaign.

G. F. Wilson & Co. have on exhibition in their store window a bayonet from the gun carried by Francis L. Southern of Quincy, the first Union soldier killed in the regular line of battle in the war of the Rebellion, at Big Bethel, Virginia.

The gun, with the bayonet attached, was one of those used in taking the body from the battlefield at Big Bethel, and was brought home by Dr. Saville, Surgeon of the 4th regiment, Mass. Infantry, of which the late Abner B. Packard was colonel, and Col. Henry Walker, well known to Quincy people, the adjutant. It was afterwards given to Thomas Smith of Co. H of the same regiment, and of which Franklin Curtis who is still active in G. A. R. affairs was captain.

This relic, the gun to which it was formerly attached having long since been destroyed by fire, is highly prized by Mr. Smith, in whose possession it has remained since 1863. Mr. Wilson also has many other war relics in the window.

A Work of Art.

Chigili Bros, the sculptors, in Swinley & Falconer's block, Water street, are on exhibition a work of art in the form of a life-size marble statue of St. John the Evangelist. Tiffany of New York is the designer and the statue was shipped this week to Mrs. Abbott of Quincy, N. Y.

Last week Mr. Tiffany and Mrs. Abbott were at the studio and readily accepted the statue.

It is cut from a solid piece of Vermont marble and shows the evangelist with book in one hand and crayon in the other. The face is as perfect as the skillful mechanic could make it. It shows St. John with eyes turned toward heaven in the act of getting inspiration for the continuation of his writings. The folds of his robe are particularly soft, and it is easily the best piece of work of its kind to leave Quincy.

Abraham Chigili made the model after a design of Tiffany, and Archimedes his brother, cut the work in marble.

Cheeky Boys.

Patrick White and James Meeney, aged 12 and 11 years, had a long ride on the trolley car of Penniman & Son's carriages. It was about 11 o'clock when White started from Penniman's stable, near the depot, with a horse and carriage for Swinley Bros. which he was to take to their office at Durgin & Merrill block.

As the carriage rolled along the right and hit the horse to a post, as the parties were not quite ready to start. He then stood on the sidewalk and admired the turnout. While thus engaged he was joined by Meeney. There was a few minutes' conversation, then the boys unbuckled the horse and getting in drove off. Ten minutes later the team was missed and it was not long before a description of it had been sent to the police of neighboring towns.

No trace of it was found however until 4 o'clock when Officer Murray held it up as the boys were driving from Houghs Neck. They had been on a grand ride, and had kept the horse on the move constantly since morning.

The horse was well tired out and hungry, but otherwise all right.

—Keep a good-sized piece of charcoal in the refrigerator until frost comes, removing it whenever every ten days or two weeks.

Surprise and Presentation.

About sixty of the many friends of Miss Levia Samuelson gave her a surprise party Saturday evening at her home on Cranich street and a very enjoyable time resulted. During the evening Miss Samuelson was presented with a gold watch and chain, the presentation being made by Rev. John A. Bernhard. The watch which was a very handsome affair was furnished by Sandberg Bros. The committee in charge were, Miss Anna Carlson, Ida Samuelson and Anton Peterson.

Worms?

Many children are troubled with worms, and it is a good idea to get rid of them. Dr. J. C. Elmer's Worm Expeller is a reliable remedy. It is a small, white, round pill, and it is easy to take. It is sold by all druggists.

The third battle of Bull Run, which is to be fought next September, will cost $1,500,000. Already troops are on the march from Ethan Allen in Vermont. They will have a 700-mile tramp. One thousand horses will be taken to the field; there will be thirty eight ambulances; and six escort wagons. The boys all over the Union are enthusiastic at the prospect of fighting on the same field where their fathers fought and bled more than forty years ago. It is expected that a vast crowd of spectators will witness the mock campaign.

G. F. Wilson & Co. have on exhibition in their store window a bayonet from the gun carried by Francis L. Southern of Quincy, the first Union soldier killed in the regular line of battle in the war of the Rebellion, at Big Bethel, Virginia.

The gun, with the bayonet attached, was one of those used in taking the body from the battlefield at Big Bethel, and was brought home by Dr. Saville, Surgeon of the 4th regiment, Mass. Infantry, of which the late Abner B. Packard was colonel, and Col. Henry Walker, well known to Quincy people, the adjutant. It was afterwards given to Thomas Smith of Co. H of the same regiment, and of which Franklin Curtis who is still active in G. A. R. affairs was captain.

This relic, the gun to which it was formerly attached having long since been destroyed by fire, is highly prized by Mr. Smith, in whose possession it has remained since 1863. Mr. Wilson also has many other war relics in the window.

A Work of Art.

Chigili Bros, the sculptors, in Swinley & Falconer's block, Water street, are on exhibition a work of art in the form of a life-size marble statue of St. John the Evangelist. Tiffany of New York is the designer and the statue was shipped this week to Mrs. Abbott of Quincy, N. Y.

Last week Mr. Tiffany and Mrs. Abbott were at the studio and readily accepted the statue.

It is cut from a solid piece of Vermont marble and shows the evangelist with book in one hand and crayon in the other. The face is as perfect as the skillful mechanic could make it. It shows St. John with eyes turned toward heaven in the act of getting inspiration for the continuation of his writings. The folds of his robe are particularly soft, and it is easily the best piece of work of its kind to leave Quincy.

Abraham Chigili made the model after a design of Tiffany, and Archimedes his brother, cut the work in marble.

Cheeky Boys.

Patrick White and James Meeney, aged 12 and 11 years, had a long ride on the trolley car of Penniman & Son's carriages. It was about 11 o'clock when White started from Penniman's stable, near the depot, with a horse and carriage for Swinley Bros. which he was to take to their office at Durgin & Merrill block.

As the carriage rolled along the right and hit the horse to a post, as the parties were not quite ready to start. He then stood on the sidewalk and admired the turnout. While thus engaged he was joined by Meeney. There was a few minutes' conversation, then the boys unbuckled the horse and getting in drove off. Ten minutes later the team was missed and it was not long before a description of it had been sent to the police of neighboring towns.

No trace of it was found however until 4 o'clock when Officer Murray held it up as the boys were driving from Houghs Neck. They had been on a grand ride, and had kept the horse on the move constantly since morning.

The horse was well tired out and hungry, but otherwise all right.

—Keep a good-sized piece of charcoal in the refrigerator until frost comes, removing it whenever every ten days or two weeks.

Surprise and Presentation.

About sixty of the many friends of Miss Levia Samuelson gave her a surprise party Saturday evening at her home on Cranich street and a very enjoyable time resulted. During the evening Miss Samuelson was presented with a gold watch and chain, the presentation being made by Rev. John A. Bernhard. The watch which was a very handsome affair was furnished by Sandberg Bros. The committee in charge were, Miss Anna Carlson, Ida Samuelson and Anton Peterson.

Worms?

Many children are troubled with worms, and it is a good idea to get rid of them. Dr. J. C. Elmer's Worm Expeller is a reliable remedy. It is a small, white, round pill, and it is easy to take. It is sold by all druggists.

UNCLE SAM.

Between 1890 and 1903 Uncle Sam increased the sale of his public lands from $1,005,000 to $8,296,000, a cash gain of $7,291,000 in one year, besides creating more homes and farms for his family.

UNDER PROTECTION.

Notes and Comments.

That Quincy is a healthy city is borne out by the fact that not a case of contagious disease has been reported to the Board of Health since July 18. This speaks well for a city of 30,000 population. There have been very few deaths since Aug. 1.

THE FESTIVITIES OF G. A. R. WEEK are saddened by the unfavorable news from the bedside of Senator Hoar. The senior Massachusetts senator has long been held in high esteem not only by his constituents but by the nation at large, and he has done much to maintain the prestige of the old Bay State.

Some papers in Germany think President Roosevelt's demonstration against Turkey was for the purpose of catching the "missionary vote." Undoubtedly there are 2,000,000 missionaries in America anxious to go in and convert Turkey. But thus far shotguns cannot be used in the field, and the most effective when dealing with the sultan of the Prophet.

The third battle of Bull Run, which is to be fought next September, will cost $1,500,000. Already troops are on the march from Ethan Allen in Vermont. They will have a 700-mile tramp. One thousand horses will be taken to the field; there will be thirty eight ambulances; and six escort wagons. experienced corps of teachers who have given this school its wide-spread reputation, will be in session. The tuition fees are the same as during the previous ten years, and pupils who complete attending may congratulate themselves that this year was the chosen time to enter the school.
COURSE OF STUDY.
The course of study prepares pupils thoroughly for all the duties of the counting-room. Bookkeeping (by any system); Stenography (Shorthand and Pitman systems); English Composition; Commercial Correspondence; Commercial Geography; Commercial History; Civil Service (preparation for examinations); Normal School Course (preparation for teaching).
Pupils will find the location of the school most accessible from all points; over 1800 cars daily, with a stopping place directly in front of the school building.

Jaynes' Thymo-Lyptol
Antiseptic Mouth Wash,
Gargle and Dentifrice.
Invaluable in connection with Jaynes' Tooth Paste to preserve the health of the teeth. It prevents decomposition of particles of food lodged between the teeth, removes foreign matter and checks the accumulation of tartar and dissolves it.
It is very effective when used as a spray for diphtheria, sore throat and nasal catarrh, and for internal use in cases of cholera, dysentery and diarrhea. Keeps the mouth wholesome, the breath sweet and the throat in healthy condition.
The antiseptic properties of Jaynes' Thymo-Lyptol make it valuable for general use as a deodorizer and disinfectant. Keeps the skin clean and safe from contagion and free from any objectionable odor. It is also successfully used for dressing wounds, bruises, sores, etc.

Poetry.
The Morning Wind.
JAMES TUCKERMAN
How it smells of the world made new—
Leafy dells that are dark and dew;
Teeming soil where the grass stands high;
Flow'rs that lift to the sun and sky
Cups of crimson, and white, and blue, Drinking sweet as the wind went by!
How it murmurs among the trees—
Full of peace as the hum of bees!
How it ripples the wayside pool,
Rocks the swan, at his silver oar
Sailing free, without oar or rule!
How it steals from the sunrise land—
Soft of touch as a mother's hand;
Soothing the fevered brow of pain,
Healing the troubled heart and brain;
Grateful as dew in desert sand,
Cooling as showers of summer rain!
Heart of the Father, deep and kind,
Breathing forth in the morning wind,
Shall I question Thy love, while still Kist by the breeze? on the sunrise hill?
Nay, in the very air I find Throb of love like a pulse's thrill!

Miscellany.
HER FIRST CASE.
Ronald Fussy, a well known physician of good repute, a bachelor, a woman hater, and dreaded by many on account of his abrupt and often rude manner, sat writing in his office, his back to the door, when some one knocked.
"Come in?" he called.
A pretty little woman in a black uniform glided into the room. When she saw the doctor she started back with a gasp, her eyes fixed themselves with a sinister expression on the little woman.
"I am very sorry to wake you up,"
she began, fearfully approaching his bedside. "I did not—"
"Who in the deuce do you take yourself for?"
"A trained nurse."
"How do I know that?"
"I wear the uniform of the Blotter Institute."
"Any one can put on black rags and call it a uniform. Who sent you?"
"Doctor Fussy, and now you are awake—"
"I don't believe you! Black dress, indeed—black lies!"
"They are the worst kind—I am a white one indoors, as you see by my fringe and apron," said Ethel, smiling.
Down on the pillow went the heavy head.
"By George! She is different from those other cats, muttered the old man to himself. "She has a ready tongue; I'll make her use it."
"I won't let her think she interests me," thought Doctor Fussy, as he opened his uncle's bedroom door an hour later.
He heard the sick man laugh heartily.
His surprise was evident when he entered the room. Ethel stood at the foot of the bed, which was now neatly made, looking innocent enough; she was protesting that she did not mean anything.
"Yes, you did," belittled the old man. "Here comes the doctor. Ronald, that midwife called me a fool!"
"Oh, please do not say—"
"Yes, you did," Ethel reiterated.
"You asked me something, and I said any fool ought to know it, and you said that was why you asked me."
"Ronald will be here tonight," he said Doctor Fussy to Ethel. "He will watch, and you will go to bed."
After a few directions about the patient, the doctor belittled, went out into the hall, entered the sitting-room and called Ethel to follow him. She looked so young and sweet that he longed to be kind and apologize for hurting her feelings; instead of doing so he inwardly called himself a brute.
"This Rudolph is a splendid nurse,"
he said. "You and he will keep good guard over your patient; if you do so all will be well; but if he has a chance to drink, he is a devil incarnate."
"He keeps an ugly instrument under his pillow," Ethel said.
"I put it there thinking it a safer place for it. I was going to tell you."
Ronald walked over to the drawer, transferred the razor to his pocket,
then turned to Ethel again as though he would say something; she waited expectantly, looking at him.
"I am—" he began, then stopped;
should he tell a woman he was sorry
he had "snubbed" her? No. "I am coming in early in the morning," he said, and strode out of the room, out of the house, without another word.
"Confound it!" he ejaculated.
"This makes me savage. Who is she?
Where have I met her? Dickens take me if I rest till I have put her in her corner!"
That night, at eleven o'clock, Ronald was in his study, his elbow on his knee,
his head in his hands, deeply thinking.
The door opened, and a boy peered in.
"If you please, sir," he faltered;
"here's a letter come whiles you was out. I forgot to give it to you. I came right out of bed to bring it, cos
I feared it might be a patient."
"Bring it here, boy; don't be afraid."
When the doctor spoke gently "But-tens" loved him, and obeyed with alacrity. Ronald patted his shoulder.
"Always let me have my mail at once,"
he said. "Now go."
The letter proved to be from the doctor's intimate friend, Robertson.
"Awfully good of him to invite me every year to the shooting party," he thought. "I have not been since—"
he sprang up, crumpling the letter in his hand. "By jove! I've found her!"
She is the little girl in black—
He sat down again to gather the facts clearly in his mind. He was going to Robertson's place in Scotland for the shooting. At Paddington station a young girl dressed in mourning entered his compartment. After the train started she suddenly burst into passionate weeping, as if she could not control herself. For a few moments Doctor Fussy gazed out of the window and listened with frowning impatience;
then he glanced at her; she looked delicate, and was evidently very lonely and unhappy. His heart was moved with compassion and he ventured to speak a soothing word. His kindness soon won her confidence, and he learned her sad little history.

Her name was Ethel Deal. Both her parents had been drowned on their way home from a party. She was being sent from one cross aunt to another, who lived in Edinburgh, where she was to live and finish her education. He encouraged her to talk to him, and she told him he was good and kind, almost like her papa; and when the tears came again he kissed her, more he knew the handkerchief was very wet, he used his own to dry her eyes. Ronald's face flushed as he remembered that episode;
of course he ought not to have done it;
but she seemed so young and childish that he could hardly have acted otherwise.
At their journey's end the girl had been met by her aunt, and Ronald bade
her goodbye and straightway forgot her.
Now here she was again, grown up, and small, sweet, possessing the power of stirring strong emotions within his soul which he strove in vain to extinguish. The more he thought of the meeting in the train, the more he wished for her confidence and friendship again.
"Why not?" he queried. "She is a woman now, so of course one can't kiss her—Ronald, you driving idiot, are you sane? Take heed while you may. So far there has been no sign of disease; but now—when you care to know whether a school girl remembers you—Bah!"
He went to bed in a bad temper, and did not feel any better until he had turned up his mind to be kind to the little nurse and ask her if her name was Ethel.
Full of this purpose he paid an early visit to No. 5, to hear that the nurse had just gone to bed. He asked Ronald why she had been on duty during the night, he having been engaged especially for that purpose.
The man explained that Mr. Key had had one of his violent attacks of temper, and insisted that nobody could do anything but the midwife, as he called her,
so both nurses had deemed it better
that for once he should be humored.
"It surprises me, the way she manages him," said Ronald. "Mr. Key always gives in to her."
For a fortnight peace reigned at No.
5. Then came a change. One morning
Ethel went to the sitting-room to finish a book and fell asleep. The sound of voices roused her. Mr. Key, who was speaking in loud, angry tones, mentioned his own name. Ronald's voice interrupted the old man's speech.
"I will not do it!" he said angrily.
"You have disinherited me because I would not marry your choice, and I won't have your money on condition that I marry some one else. I shall marry whom I choose, when I choose and where I choose, and not because I want your fortune!"
"Then I'll leave every penny to the midwife!"
"Do so," retorted the doctor. "But I am sure she is not the girl who would accept such a gift."
"If she did, I suppose you'd be ready enough to marry her, for all your high and mighty talk," angrily returned the old man. "Look here, Ronald,
I won't have her trifled with because she's poor. I've seen you cast sheep's eyes in her direction—"
"Silence, sir! You have no right to imply that I am a scoundrel. Keep to the question. Of this be assured, I'll never touch a penny of your money,
in any case, so leave it as you will,
I have given; as for Miss Deal—"
But Ethel heard no more; with burning cheeks she stole quietly from the room. Had that terrible old man divined her secret? Did he know she loved him? He felt that it was possible that his nephew cared for her? Ronald had been very kind of late;
sometimes she fancied he remembered their first meeting. Then, when he gave her some directions in his usual businesslike way the fancy vanished,
and she felt that to this woman-hating doctor she was only a nurse whose ability inspired in him a sentiment rather stronger than the liking aroused by other women of her class—and that was all.
His last outburst of passion proved too much for Mr. Key; he had a stroke which left him bereft of his senses,
and possessing a desire to destroy himself. Several physicians, in consultation, decided that he must be strictly guarded. He became for a few days as docile as a babe, though he was never for one moment left alone.
A week later, as Ethel was busy in the sitting-room, she heard a smothered cry, followed by a short scuffle and the fall of a heavy body. She sprang to the half-open door of the bedroom, and for a second was paralyzed by what she saw within.
Ronald lay senseless on the floor,
and before a long mirror in which she could see his face reflected, stood the madman, in the act of placing a sharp instrument to his throat; his bloodshot eyes seemed bursting from their sockets; his lips were drawn backward over his clenched teeth, and his whole expression was one of savage determination.
To draw his attention to herself meant instant death for her, Ethel thought; her first impulse was to turn and fly from this terrible scene; the next—she hesitated. Her hand thrust her arms through his banded elbows and tightly locked her fingers together, while she uttered several piercing screams for help.
The mania struggled, but could not free himself from the pining little nurse. In less time than it takes to tell it, the room seemed full of people.
It so happened that Doctor Fussy was almost at the door when the first cry for help reached his ears and he rushed in.
"Oh, Ronald," cried Ethel, in her agony, "save me! He is breaking my arms!"
The madman was secured, and the brave girl, utterly exhausted, laid on a couch in the sitting-room. Doctor Fussy remained with his uncle. An hour passed, and then he came to Ethel.
His face looked white and anxious,
and she felt that something had happened.
"Mr. Key—" she faltered.
"He has passed away—in the greatest anguish. What he suffered during the last hour no one knows. It is over now, however."

Letter from the Capital.
Washington, Aug. 29, 1904.
The negro issue in politics refuses to retire into oblivion. It came before the President again yesterday, and may require drastic treatment concerning the fight in Louisiana between the
"lily whites" and the "black and tans." Look calls attention to the fact that the President has refused to recognize the "lily whites" and that the "regulars" are in control in a majority of the Southern states. But the "regulars" stand upon their pure and stainless dignity, refusing to advance, and the result promises to be a double set of Republican candidates for both Congress and Presidential Electors.
The negro is also to be an issue in the sister Virginia. The Democrats in West Virginia, notwithstanding the diplomatic concession to Mr. Davis, will make a vigorous campaign on the issue of restricting if not prohibiting the negro vote. It will be an issue from now on. Virginia Democrats, in a general effort to retain the entire congressional delegation, have appointed a score of political school-teachers to travel through the southern part of the State, from now until election day, to state illiterate whites how to read and deposit the new ballot.

Mr. John J. Cornwell, Democratic candidate for Governor of West Virginia, was in Washington yesterday.
He is a gentleman of distinguished appearance, tall, black eyes, and thirty years of age—very young looking to be the recipient of such honors at the hands of his party.
The first anniversary of the removal to this city of the Seventh Day Adventists of the United States from Battle Creek, Mich., where they were driven out by a disastrous fire, is taking place today. This large religious community has been endeavoring to build another college at Tacoma, Park, one of the most beautiful of Washington's suburbs, and articles of incorporation have been filed. The purpose is said to be "to promote the principles of higher education, and to provide proper facilities for the harmonious development of the intellectual, moral and physical powers of mankind." At a meeting this week the preachers of this cult announced that they were in favor of all harmless Sunday recreation and opposed to the enforcement of the so-called Sabbath law.

There will not be such a paucity of speechmaking during the campaign as was at first apprehended. At least three members of the Cabinet, and perhaps four, will be heard from on the hustings, but for the first time within the memory of man, there is not one of the President's counselors who has any reputation whatever as an orator. Secretary Shaw has a certain liveliness and readiness upon his feet, but he cannot,
by the widest stretch of imagination be called an orator. He has a handsome, boyish face, but he weighs 325 pounds at the present hour, and excites
the risibles like the fat boy in Pickwick. Moreover he plays upon a single string like Paganini, and Congress has shown marked dislike to his music.
Judge Parker will make eight or ten speeches during the campaign. Judge.

Wireless Electric Typewriter.
Wonders will never cease and from the marvellous discoveries of this age of the world we may indeed wonder what will be the next invention which will beat all former records. The latest invention in the typewriter line is that which is termed the wireless electric typewriter operated by a new kind of electric wave, discovered by the Danish electrician Paulsen, who is credited with having brought out this wireless typewriter which the New York Tribune discusses as not an incredible fact, although not likely to prove exceptionally useful.
It is said that he has been able to operate the keyboard of a typewriter at a distance without any visible connection between it and the instrument at hand. It is added that he has also discovered a new kind of "electric wave," whose existence has been suspected but which has never until now been revealed. According to a Copenhagen dispatch, the man made use of this mysterious agency to produce the reported result.

The story possesses one feature which lends it credibility. Paulsen himself is an ingenious and reputable inventor.
He is best known as the author of apparatus for recording a telephone message without the use of a wire, and for whom the latter is designed is away.
—Gloucester Times.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 27, 1904.

George Frisbie Hoar.

The loss of Senator Hoar will fall upon the Commonwealth and people of Massachusetts as a sad and serious blow. For a period of thirty-six years, Mr. Hoar has represented his State in Congress, since 1871, in the Senate, a length of service in that august body unequalled by any of his predecessors. He has come to be identified nationally with the existence of the authority of our State, and by his fellow citizens here he has long been held in admiring regard, approaching reverence, for his great learning, his integrity and his humanity, that which no one would wish to turn for one to take his place.

There is a very warm feeling for George Frisbie Hoar in the hearts of the people of Massachusetts. He stands for a good many of the ideals of New England character. A scholar of recognized rank, a politician without guile, a public official whose integrity is as clear as the sunlight, and a partisan who holds his conscience superior to party—a man as pure in public life as he is in his private relations.

Mr. Hoar entered the public service to serve, not to make money. A few years ago he told the simple story of his experience. "Before I came to Congress," he said, "I had built up a law practice that brought me an income of $50,000 a year, and I had every reason to believe that the practice would grow to $50,000. I had saved some money, about $10,000, and I believed I could keep my practice and still attend to my duties in Congress. After more than 30 years in the public service, I find myself at 75 with my law practice gone and the accumulations of my young days dissipated." What an admirable record of the poor "great member of the millionaires' club"—Boston Courier.

A bulletin issued by Senator Hoar's son Thursday afternoon read as follows: "The senator's illness has been getting better. He has passed that acute stage he has been in for the past week, and although he is still a weak and sick man his condition does not warrant the belief that he is to pass away. It will be several days, however, before we can fully determine what the result will be."

Reunion.

A happy reunion of the sons and daughters of the late, Deacon Elijah Baxter of this city, held recently at the home of Mr. William Quincy Baxter of East Milton in observance of his birthday. It was particularly enjoyable as it was the first time for nearly forty years that these three brothers and four sisters had had the pleasure of meeting around the same table.

The guests were: Mrs. M. S. Kittredge of Quincy; Mrs. L. H. Holbrook of Kansas City, Kan.; Mrs. G. Nichols and Miss E. L. Baxter of Dedham; Mr. Elijah B. Baxter of Dorchester; and Mr. Charles W. Baxter of Melrose.

The three brothers are all veterans of the Civil war.

The Fall River Mills.

The discussion about the probable starting of the Seacommet mills has been brought to an end. The directors have decided that it would be better for the Seacommet mills to follow the policy of the majority and not try to open until the executive committee of the Manufacturers' association deemed such a movement prudent for all the mills. Mr. Conner, the agent, has fallen in with their suggestions and will not try to start alone.

With this element of doubt removed, the officers of the Cotton Manufacturers' association are firmer today than they have ever been in the belief that there will be no break in the ranks of the signers to the wage agreement. The renewal of speculation in cotton has further added to the difficulties in the way of the manufacturers who might care to run and to take the feeling in favor of keeping the mills closed is stronger than it has been at any time since the strike began.

An Extended Trip.

Today George A. Farquhar of 19 Centre street, Quincy, and W. H. Matherson of Braintree, start on an extended tour through the Canadian Northwest, by way of Vancouver and Edmonton. It is their intention to travel through British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, California, New Mexico and Texas.

Girl Hero.

Harry Smith employed at the summer residence of Joseph C. Morse at Rose Cliff, North Weymouth, was rescued from drowning Thursday by Miss Ernestine Atwood, a 10-year-old Melrose girl who is spending her summer at Rose Cliff.

Smith started to swim to a float some distance from the shore when his strength gave out and he sank from exhaustion. Miss Atwood heard his cries and running to the float by a gangway built from the shore, dived for Smith and brought him to the surface, when his brother, Roy Atwood, assisted in bringing Smith ashore, where he was resuscitated after considerable hard work.

Fire at Randolph.

The old Thomas White box manufacturing, Daley's hotel and the dwelling house of W. Simmons at Holbrook were destroyed by fire Friday. The fire started from a naphtha explosion in the box manufacturing.

At one time it looked as though the whole business section of the town would be destroyed and aid was summoned from Brockton, Randolph and Braintree.

The wedding of Charles Eaton and Miss Mary Nelson of Wakefield on Wednesday evening ended in a runaway accident caused by a practical joke. The bride and groom and driver had a narrow escape from death, and the driver was so badly injured that he will be confined to his room for some time. The din of tin cans tied to the wheels frightened the horses and they broke into a run. Biscue was thrown from his seat, his leg was broken, and he received an ugly gash in the back of his head.

The Rockland Standard, one of the most widely awake weekly journals in Plymouth County, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary with a magnificent two-page edition, copiously illustrated and finely printed. It had nice pictures of the late Charles G. Estabrook, its founder, and of Joshua S. Smith, its able editor for over thirty years; as well as many other half-tones of prominent men and buildings.

CITY BRIEFS.

The nights this week have been decidedly fallish.

The police scooped in a number of drunks Saturday night.

Mr. L. O. Richardson spent Sunday with friends in Vermont.

The street railway is painting its poles on Hancock street.

The next race of the Quincy yacht club will be on Labor Day.

Mr. Oscar F. Funck of Granite street has gone to New Hampshire.

Dr. H. C. Hallows has returned from a short visit to Maine.

D. Smith of Lynn was in Quincy Sunday and called on old friends.

Parents have begun to think about getting children ready for school.

Miss M. Jennie Davies of Granite street is enjoying a week's vacation.

Officers Broberg Cahill and Curtin went on their vacations this week.

Mrs. Charles Tower entertained her niece, Miss Mollie Brown, over Sunday.

The Saturday half-holidays are drawing to a close. One more winds them up.

The tax collector sold 46 parcels of real estate at auction Monday for taxes of 1903.

Fredrick W. Plummer principal of the Woodward Institute has returned from Maine.

The sewer department employees held an outing at Germantown Saturday and had a grand time.

Commissioner Knowlton is busy making some needed repairs to the school buildings.

James Parker of the claim department of the Old Colony street railway is having his vacation.

Dr. Edwin E. Davis has returned from his vacation trip and may be found at his office as usual.

Mrs. M. Gibson of Fitchville, Vt., is the guest of Mr. Joseph Fletcher and family of Granite street.

Twenty members of Paul Revere W. R. G. attended the G. A. R. convention at Boston, last week.

Frank Bowditch, clerk for F. H. Crane & Sons, Saville avenue, leaves today for a two weeks' vacation.

The decorations on the Savings Bank building were taken down Saturday night on account of the high wind.

Although it was a hot day Thursday there was a cool breeze that freshened into quite a gale in the early evening.

The many young friends in this city of Mrs. Walter Gardner will be sorry to learn that she has been seriously ill.

Frank W. Nightingale, collector for H. H. Faxon left last week for a two weeks' vacation at New Hampshire.

rid of your corns. Do you realize the terrible danger in using a knife
on the feet? Paring, cutting, trimming, make the corn grow. There is only one effective, dependable Corn Cure
—Jaynes' Warranted
Corn Remover, the only corn cure guaranteed to take off the corn, or your money back.

It removes the root with the corn—prevents it from regrowing; cures
Callouses and Bunions.

If you're a sufferer from corns or bunions get a bottle of Jaynes' Corn Remover at once. We guarantee it to do all we claim or Refund the Money. You take no risk. Read the testimony of sufferers who have been cured, and Get a Bottle Now.

"Your Corn Cure has removed corns from every toe on my feet. It is worth 100 times the price you ask for it."—D. D. PRATER, Gloucester, Mass.

"Corns and Callouses—sore and painful, troubled me for twenty years. One bottle of Jaynes' Corn Remover cured me completely."—FRANK DONNELLY, Somerville, Mass.

"I had a bunion on my foot, larger than a silver dollar. It was so sore and tender that I was obliged to wear a No. 8 shoe on a No. 6 foot. After faithfully applying your Corn Cure the bunion was entirely removed, and I now wear with comfort my No. 6 shoe."—R. W. PRINCE, San Francisco, Cal.

"Suffered terribly with soft and hard corns, especially between my toes. Spent dollars for relief, but got none until I paid fifteen cents for a bottle of your Corn Remover, which completely cured me. I recommend it to every sufferer with corns."—Miss Bertha B. STURGEON, Dress Maker, 16 Sterling St., Roxbury, Mass.

"There's going to be one result of the strike, so the master says," said Jacob, after more sober reverie, "and that is, to both the small builders to get some for their jobs, and prices will rule high for granite in small lots.
There's considerable of the small work going on in spite of the strike if they can get the stone, because they're too small affairs for the strikers to look after. Master says there will be a great hunt over the country for boulders that are worth splitting, but there's nothing within fifty miles of here but was used up long ago. I'd go hunt myself, if there was any near by."

"That won't help us any then,"
said his wife.

This incident happened at the time of the great strike of the New England granite workers, in the year 1892.
Jacob Barker had been in the employ of a contractor in Boston, but his humble home was some miles away in the edge of a thinly settled suburban village. Some days after John Fletcher a middle aged man of giant frame and square features, was at the Barker home. The lines of care and worry were so prominent in his form and face that it needed no interpreter to voice his misfortune. He was a new hire of customers who had alighted on the night of the strike.

"Jacob," he was saying, "they're telling me you have been hunting a job for me and not for yourself. As why I ask 'em does he hunt for me, when e's got no job himself? A man 'cause Jacob's got a kind heart in him and he'd rather lose his self than have your little ones suffer.
An' I tell 'em that is true. An' I told 'em that Molly Barker 'ad been at my house an' a-workin' her hands off so my ole 'oman could have more to eat. An' the God bless Jacob Barker an' his wife."

"Tut, tut, John," said Jacob,
"you'd have done the same by us if we had got behind hand, so don't say anything about it. I've got to work doing something, if I have to work for nothing. If I don't I shall become lazy and become a tramp."

"Same 'ere, Jacob," said John Fletcher. "Much as I need the money to keep the family going, I'll work rather than loaf. I don't get no pay I'll lose all the notion of it if I don't keep 'em. Say Jacob, while the job's coming round why don't ye do that well ye've been tellin' about for years?
I'll help ye pay back fer what you've bin doing fer me. Then we'll be even."

"There, Jacob," said Mrs. Barker
"he's said it now. It's strange we didn't think of doing that well before.
It's simple, and can be undertaken by any physician who is familiar with the use of the throat mirror. He first makes the trachea and larynx insensible by cocaine or anæsthesia; then a thin rubber tube is introduced into the lungs, through which the patient can breathe, the whole process lasting, perhaps, ten minutes. He has treated but five patients, but these so successfully that he expects a general adoption of the method. The most efficient remedy is the well known tuberculin of Prof.
Koch, and the next best is cod liver oil. He reports that he has succeeded in making tuberculin bacilli disappear completely in from four to eight weeks.
Through this method he asserts that a safe diagnosis can be made of consumption of the lungs, which has not heretofore been possible. The hypo-dermic injection of tuberculin might show that the patient suffers from tuberculosis, yet the state of the malady was not revealed. He calls his new method
"lung inflation."—Boston Herald.

"A bad beginning makes a good ending," they say in the old country.
The stone's all over or under this hole sure, and nobody knows how much it is. Do you notice how flat and true it is, Jacob?"

"Smooth as a floor, John."

"That's just as true as you live,
Jacob. An' a stone 'at's true an' smooth's that he's bin split some of. What d'ye think of that, Jacob?"

"Gracious, if that was only granite nearly as big as the one on my land we wouldn't lack for a job, would we John?"

"But John had begun digging vigorously outside the wall and was making a ditch on a tangent with his side.
Jacob caught the idea and struck in at once to ditch in the opposite direction. The two men were thumping their picks down here and there all over the space from which they had removed the stone. They were making sundry ejaculations of illustrated surprise. Then Jacob drew up and mopped his sweaty face.

"Bad luck, John. Confounded bad luck to begin with, isn't it?"

"But John was still prodding busily with his pick and did not answer at once."

An American Stonehenge.

THOMAS WESTWORTH HIGGINS.

Far up on these abandoned mountain farms.
Now drifting back to forest wild again,
The long, gray walls extend their clasp-
ing arms,
Palmetto monuments of vanished men.

Serpents in stone, they wind o'er hill and dell
Mid orchards long deserted, fields unshorn;
The crumbling fragments resting where they fell,
Forgotten, worthless to a race new-born.

Nearer than stones of stoned Saxon name These' speechless relics to our hearts should come.

No taller for a priest's or monarch's tomb,
What years of lonely toil he took!
What years of long labor, and what
To yield the chipmunk nest a secret nook.
The gliding snake one more sequestered spot.

So little time on earth; so much to do;
Yet all that waste of weary toil-worn hands!
Life came and went; the patient task
The men are gone, the idle structure stands.

Miscellaneous.

JACOB'S WELL.

"There Mary," said Jacob Barker
as he entered the kitchen and put down his dinner pail. "It's come, just as I expected it would.

The granite workers have struck and the men all quit work tonight. There's no prospect of work again in a long time."

His wife, who was busy setting
the table for supper, looked at him with an anxious face. The news alarmed her.

"It will be pretty hard for us, Mary,"
he added, stooping to play with the baby who was reaching up her tiny hands from the cradle for the best way can find something to do. "I wouldn't wonder if so much if it wasn't for the mortgage coming due."

Mrs. Barker's face, after the first flush of unelcome announcement over, grew brighter.

"Well Jacob," she said cheerfully, giving the last touches to her preparations for supper, "if we have no work,
we'll manage to get along all right.
I suppose the men think they're ill-used and want to strike. But I believe that if it is the best way to manage matters. I know they're honest and think employers have to be driven to give them fair play. There's the master; he's looking pretty solemn

Notes and Comments.

Vermont has its State election next Tuesday, and so far no great interest is manifested.

The vacation months are over, and yet to a good many people the two best vacation months of the year are just opening.

An Indiana man who paid six hundred dollars for an automobile and then spent two thousand dollars for repairs on it has filed a petition in bankruptcy and asks the courts to relieve him of the machine. He will have many sympathizers.

Some of the farmers have been busy this week getting their hay from the pastures in this city. Tuesday a part of one large load slipped off the front of the Patriot office, blocking the car track for a rod or more; delaying the cars a few moments but was soon removed. Nearly an hour's time was spent in reloading.

A Jail Sentence.

Fred McGowan and Bert Burrell, the two old Colony street railway conductors arrested by the police last week for being concerned in the transfer frauds, will spend the next twenty days in the House of Correction at Dedham.

The specific charge against the two men was larceny. They were arraigned in court last week and held until Thursday morning for a hearing. John W. McAnaney appeared for the defendants at that time, while District Attorney represented the government.

Contrary to expectations, and to the disappointment of the court spectators, there was no hearing. When the case was called the defendants retracted their plea of not guilty and entered a plea of nolo contendere. The court accepted this plea and sentenced each to twenty days in the House of Correction.

Want House Open to Public.

To the Editor:

Will you please try and find out for the public at the Quincy Historical society does not keep the John Adams house open to visitors, as the Daughters of the Revolution keep the John Adams house which is close by. The latter place can be visited any time through the day from early morning until into the evening. It is difficult to get into the historical rooms at any time of the day, if at all. The grounds about the house and the outside of the house is in danger of abuse. The small boys have already made a great deal of mischief on the house and the outside of the house. Quincy people do not realize the interest these old houses and their contents have for visitors. An interest continually increasing, as proved by the past year or so. The Historical society has the advantage of the Daughters of the Revolution, and the number of relics gathered and the added interest of its having been the home of Abigail Adams, the intelligent, resourceful and capable American woman.

Why cannot both houses be put under the same care-taker and kept at the same hours? Respectfully yours,
John Smith.

It Was the Janitor.

A gentleman from Athol came into town unannounced. Entering one of the banks he informed one of those in attendance that he was connected with the bank at Athol. He had heard one of Quincy's bank men, that there isn't an umpire at hand to order some of the offenders to a bench, way back.

Everybody is speaking of the nice pleasant weather we have enjoyed lately. Not too hot, or too cool. Just what has pleased the many summer visitors. It appears a little dusty on some streets that are not watered, and some lawns are a little rusty and dry, but just the weather for ripening the corn and vegetables. This is the third day of September and soon we may expect cool weather.

An effort will be made during the coming session of Congress for the establishment of a department of Mining and Metallurgy. By reason of its great influence upon all other resources and industries and the advancement of the country, many men of influence think mining should receive equal consideration with agriculture, and other pursuits. Certain it is that if it were worth while to keep a weather bureau running, the Government might recognize an important industry.

Official reports from Canada show that this country's commercial relations with that highly loyal province are in a very satisfactory state, even without reciprocity. For the year ending 1903, there was a decline in Canadian exports of over $12,000,000, and an increase of over $1,000,000 in imports. The imports are mostly from the United States, while the decline in exports is owing to a falling off in sales in England.

Head Academy Notes.

The Thayer Master will be at the Academy Monday, Sept. 12, from 9 till 5 for consultation.

During last spring a card catalogue of all the former members of the school was made, including nearly nine hundred names. By correspondence the addresses of more than eight hundred have been secured. Plans are being formed for a reunion in the latter part of October. Any information in regard to any persons in the following list will be welcomed by the Head Master. Following the name of each pupil is the town from which he entered, and the school and the date of his leaving.

One More Time.

Owing to the closeness of last Saturday's game at South Quincy and the great rivalry between the two teams, South Quincy and Merrymount, the game was postponed until Monday, Monday, Sept. 5th, at 10 A. M.

Earlier in the season, the Merrymounts defeated the Cornish Athletics in two games at South Quincy. The Cornish Athletics, the Quincy's 1904 team, and the St. Marys. The left Merrymounts and South Quincy to fight for the championship of the city. In the first game, Aug. 13, Merrymounts won by a score of 10 to 0. In the second game, last Saturday, South Quincy had their hands full in defeating Merrymounts, 2 to 1.

The game arranged for labor day is at the request of several of Quincy's baseball enthusiasts. The rivalry between the two teams is so great and both teams are playing such fine ball, Monday's game bids fair to be the hottest contest of the season.

Bart MacLean will officiate as umpire, and the following is a list of the players:

Merrymounts: Taylor C., Baker L., Gledos C., Gledos C., Gledos C., Gledos C., Gledos C., Gledos C., Gledos C., Gledos C.

School Committee Meeting.

Finances and additional accommodations for the High school were discussed at length at Tuesday night's meeting of the School Committee. Messrs. Burke, Hallows, Hunting, Porter, Reed and St. John were present. The question of finance was discussed and brought out the fact that it seemed impossible to continue the schools until the end of the year without an additional appropriation; or any evening schools next winter.

The matter was referred to the subcommittee on finance.

On the matter of additional accommodations for the High school, the discussion brought out that when schools opened in September there would probably be from 60 to 75 more pupils than could be well accommodated. The matter was referred to the chairman and superintendent.

The following resignations of teachers were accepted:

High school—James D. Howlett, substitute and Miss Martha P. Sawyer. Adams school—Miss Sarah A. Packard, master's assistant. Cranch school—Miss Minnie E. Welsh, Miss Annie S. Keenan. Washington school—Miss Bessie L. Drew.

Wollaston school—Miss Nettie M. Delano.

Supervisor of drawing—Miss Lillian M. Dearborn.

Miss Mary W. Holden, master's assistant at the John Hancock, was granted a leave of absence.

Miss Annie B. Marden was transferred from the Wollaston to the Adams school.

The following teachers were substituted: High—Percy F. Parson as sub-master and Herman Gammons as assistant. Cranch—Miss Annie S. Keenan. John Hancock—Miss Elizabeth Hiscock as master's assistant. Washington—Miss Ethel Vogler. Wollaston—Miss Fannie G. Blair.

Supervisor of drawing—Miss Flora M. Shackley.

Wollaston Yacht Club.

Sunday the six Wollaston boats with four Quincy boats raced from Duxbury to Wellfleet, over a 30 mile course. Two classes started: The Claytonia, Wollaston, and the Wollaston. The Claytonia won in one class, and Memento, Goblin, Brant, Hustler, Marvel and Moondyne in the other. The Claytonia won in the first class and the Marvel in the second.

Tuesday morning the Wollaston Yacht club had a regatta. The regatta was a success, and the Wollaston Yacht club played the strong Wellfleet team, defeating them 16 to 3. This is the second defeat of the year for the Wellfleet team, and a large crowd witnessed the home team's defeat.

Quantum Yacht Club.

The house committee of the Quantum Yacht club keep things constantly on the move at the club house. For Wednesday night they had a smoke talk and a party which proved very interesting. Another grand good time has been arranged for this afternoon. The yacht race of the week will be placed at the disposal of the ladies who will be given a sail about the bay. In addition to this there will be a series of interesting water sports. In the evening there will be an illumination of the club house and dancing.

Slight Fire.

A small fire which was extinguished by citizens without calling out the fire department occurred at the store of Mrs. Bailey on Water street, Saturday afternoon. The only damage done was the loss of a large awning which was completely burned.

The fire originated from a lighted cigar being thrown upon the awning from the Shamrock club room, which occupies the upper part of the building.

Birthdays Celebrated.

Capt. Hunt, one of Quincy's well known veterans was 82 years old Monday and the event was observed that evening in a manner befitting the occasion, at his home off Hancock street.

From early candle light until late in the evening he was kept busy grasping the hands of his many friends who had called to extend congratulations and to wish him many more years of health and happiness.

Capt. Hunt's life has been an eventful one. He was born in Scituate, Aug. 29, 1822, and was the son of Nathan and Catherine Hunt. His father was lost at sea when he was but two years of age; his ship, the schooner Ocean of Hingham, foundering on the Flying Pan shoals off the North Carolina coast. When he was four years old his mother came to Quincy. His education was received in the public schools of Quincy, and then in common with all boys of that time in the stone cutters' trade. He worked at this trade for many years. Later he learned the stone masons' trade and was afterward engaged in building sea walls along the New England coast and in Boston harbor. He was always fond of the water and during his active life he saved eight persons from a watery grave.

He was one of the minute men of '61, and when President Lincoln called for volunteers he enlisted in Co. H, 4th Mass. Infantry, which was commanded by the late Col. Abner B. Packard. "The Constitution" he participated in many battles. From the ranks he rose step by step until he was commissioned a captain.

At the close of the war he returned to Quincy and resumed his trade as a stone mason at which he worked until 1882.

He was elected a constable in 1847 and has held that office by election or appointment ever since, with the exception of the years he was in the army. He was also a volunteer member of the Quincy Fire department, and during the palmy days of the old hand tubs he ran to many fires with the old Niagara which he was attached for twenty years, then as fire foreman.

For the past twenty years he has been a deputy fish and game warden and has proved a very efficient officer.

He is a member of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., and is also a Mason. He is still vigorous and his age seems to tell but little upon him, and but for intemperate attacks of rheumatism he would be as spry as ever.

Many of his old friends were present Monday evening and as the party were reminiscing about the festive days were exchanged.

The Republican Convention.

Boston, Aug. 20.—Calls are just issued by the Republican State committee for the state, congressional, county, city and town meetings, and for the palmy days of the old hand tubs he ran to many fires with the old Niagara which he was attached for twenty years, then as fire foreman.

For the past twenty years he has been a deputy fish and game warden and has proved a very efficient officer.

He is a member of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., and is also a Mason. He is still vigorous and his age seems to tell but little upon him, and but for intemperate attacks of rheumatism he would be as spry as ever.

Many of his old friends were present Monday evening and as the party were reminiscing about the festive days were exchanged.

High Taxes.

The Globe gives the accompanying interesting table showing the tax rates in the various cities and towns of the Metropolitan district for last year and this year. An analysis of the table shows that the tax rate has been increased in sixteen places. Fourteen places show a reduction. The average of the cities eight of the fourteen shows an increase from 10 cents to $1.10. Salem shows the smallest increase and Woburn the largest, with Cambridge and Newton close seconds at $1 each. Quincy comes next to these two cities with an increase of 70 cents.

At the same time there is issued the call for the republican caucuses. These will be held either Tuesday, September 27, or Wednesday, September 28. The meetings will be held at them for all of the conventions named above and the appointment of delegates will be on the same basis, except that for representative conventions there will be no delegates for every 50 votes as for senatorial and town meetings. Special instructions are issued by the committee for the guidance of the voters. The caucuses Tuesday evening, the 27th, are for the cities and towns which have adopted the joint caucus act. In these the political parties will meet at the same time and place and in the same manner as on election day. There are twenty-one cities and towns which come under this act, as follows: Brockton, Cambridge, Chelsea, Chelsea, Everett, Gloucester, Haverhill, Holyoke, Lawrence, Lowell, Lynn, Medford, New Bedford, Newton, North Adams, Quincy, Somerville, Springfield, Taunton, Waltham, Worcester, Middleboro, Groveland. In all other places the caucuses will be held Wednesday.

Class in Millinery.

The new trade class in Millinery, announced by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston, to commence September 6, is a step in the right direction; for it provides yet another opportunity for the young women to find self-support through a lucrative trade.

The aim of this trade class is to offer a thorough training in the making of hats. Competent "Makers" are in demand and can earn from five to twelve a week, with the further incentive in the possibility of becoming, at some time, "trimmer" with an ever expanding salary.

Overflow at High.

The School Committee have been unable to find rooms outside of the High school building for the pupils in excess of what can be accommodated in the present building. The sub-committee to whom the matter was referred has therefore decided that the only thing to do is to hold two sessions.

The three upper classes, 1904, 1905 and 1906, and as many of the freshmen class as possible, will attend the regular session which closes at 1.15. The remainder of the freshmen class will attend an afternoon session which will commence at 1.15 and continue until 4.15.

It cannot be definitely stated at present what the number of pupils at the afternoon session will be. The prospects are that there will be from 60 to 75.

In running the school in this manner it will be necessary to employ an extra corps of teachers. Extra teachers would also be necessary if outside rooms were used, but under the plan adopted the rental of the extra rooms will be saved.

New Pastor.

The pulpit of the Atlantic Methodist Episcopal church for the next year or two, is to be occupied by a western man, this time from Gloucester, Indiana.

Mr. Wright is a gentleman of large physique with a strong though pleasing voice, and he easily maintains his reputation as a fine preacher which has preceded him.

He is a graduate of the De Pann University and a member of the New West Indiana Conference and leaves his work as a pastor in that conference to complete his studies by taking a theological course at the Boston University.

He began his pastorate in Atlantic last Sunday. At present his address is No. 72 Mt. Vernon street, Boston, but in the near future he expects to reside in Atlantic.

Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

The brokers announce to the attending boat and stockholders of the Fore River Ship and Engine Co. that the plan of reorganization has become operative. Bondholders and stockholders are requested to pay their assessments as follows: Fifty percent, on or before Sept. 15, 1904, 25 percent, on or before Sept. 29, 25 percent, on or before Oct. 13, 1904. Interest will be allowed on prepayments at the rate of 4 percent per annum.

The assessments provided for by the plan of reorganization are: Bondholders $400 per bond, preferred stockholders $33.33-1/3 per share, common stockholders $100 for all 15 shares deposited.

It is now the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, a Massachusetts corporation.

Immense Grapevine.

The largest grapevine in this state, and probably in New England, is at the residence of Martin E. Hawes, editor of Weymouth Transcript, at East Weymouth. The trunk of the vine is more than a foot thick, and the branches cover half a dozen trees and run to the top, sixty to eighty feet high. Three bushes of grapes were gathered this week and there are from one to two bushes more on the vine, but the trees are so tall and limbs so slender that it will be impossible to pick them. It is a wild grape, with only four or five in a cluster, but the bigness of the vine count for the quantity. The roots run into a large meadow where they get an abundance of nourishment.

At Bull Run.

A letter from Mr. J. Matthews with Co. H, 5th Mass Regiment, at Manassas, Va., dated Sept. 7, says, "Boys have had a strenuous time. Have been on manoeuvres since Sunday night at midnight. Leave the camp Thursday at midnight for further operations."

The strike of the butcher workmen, which has demoralized the meat packing industry throughout the country for the last two months, was officially declared off on Thursday. When the packers were notified that it had been decided to end the strike they announced that they would give places as far as possible to the skilled men. It was stated at the same time that many of these men would be unable to secure their old places as in many cases the work was being performed in a satisfactory manner by men who had been secured since the commencement of the strike.

The men now return to work under the conditions that existed before the strike.

The first rain for a fortnight fell Thursday evening. During the afternoon it looked as though rain might be expected any moment, but it was not until 6.30 that it came. There was a lot of distant thunder at first, but little lightning. Then it rained. Up to nearly 9 o'clock it rained quite hard. Then it stopped and but little rain fell afterward. The rain was needed very badly as the ground was very dry, and the lawns already show improvement. More rain is needed.

The last of two large elm trees that have stood for many score years in front of the residence of the late Dr. Charles S. French, on Chestnut street, is being removed to make room for the enlarging of Mr. Johnson's market.

Most bodily ills arise from a maltreated stomach. No man can do his work well who is afflicted with indigestion. I am glad to state that it is dangerous to delay if you have the slightest stomach trouble. Get a bottle of Peppercure at once. Peppercure is the greatest cure for stomach ills, weakened digestive organs, acid stomach and constipation. It relieves immediately, cures without delay and keeps your whole system in good condition. It restores the digestive organs so that they properly assimilate your food.

You can always rely upon Peppercure. When everything else has Poetry.

A Song of the Storm.

PHILIP ROBERT MARSTON.

Across the barren shore
We hear the breakers roar;

See them shrike upon the shore;
Hear, hear, the sea's great cry;

The wind blows loud and shrill,
The sea leaves him on bill;

Moonlight and tempest fill
The pure and stormy sky.

'Neath clashing winds of night
The sea reveals its might;

And clear the pale, brown light
Of driven billows gleams;

O bright tempestuous sea!
From whose gulf foam months' die

Ships hauled to the lee,
As souls by evil dreams.

See such a sea, and long Though the thunder and the song

Of breakers white and strong,
Exploded on the wind.

Against the cliff the wind
Strikes madly, being blind;

What shall the daybreak find
Upon the barren shore?

O white and windy deep!
How many millions sleep!

'Neath the valley and the steep;
O bright careening sea!

O white, warm, halcyon sea!
Blows hissing all one way—

O loud, resounding bay—
O torn and stricken lee!

Miscellany.

Philip's Promotion.

"All right," said Philip, struggling with the white tie. A servant had just informed him that his father wished to see him in the library.

Philip was arraying his comely self for the Morton's party, and as he finished he surveyed himself a moment,

then tucking up his gloves he stalked

down the stairs and into the study

where his father sat at a table

writing.

Philip's father was a great railroad magnate of whom most men stood in wholesome awe, but his stern face lighted up wonderfully as the athletic

chair and laid a hand affectionately on his shoulder.

"What is it, excellency?" Philip asked, and the tones of his voice sent a thrill of pride through his father's pulse.

"Sit down, Philip," said his father,

motioning to a chair near at hand.

"Were you in that horse-drawn carriage that nearly upset a horse and an old woman from the country?"

"Yes, I was there," said Philip.

"You see, father, the boys took old

Steele with them. He knows all about motorcycles and things like that, but not much else. But Steele put on airs, so the boys pulled him off the seat, and two or three of us tried to run it. It really ran us," said Philip, laughing.

"Steele must have had his foot on something—we couldn't find it—and you never saw anything like that, did you? I really don't know where they got it; perhaps they're going to

for Steele turned sulky and wouldn't let them know where the brake was."

"I should think of not," said his father, smiling. "Of course, but for the accident there would have been no

real harm in such a thing."

"Except listening to Steele's language, father; it was electrically blue,

he was so upset in more ways than one."

"But," went on his father, "is life never going to mean anything but a motor and good things, you know? If you are thorough school, and it is certainly true for you to take a more serious view of life. You have no idea of what it means to earn your daily bread."

"Oh, but you do that for me far too well," said Philip, laughing.

"In fact, you earn cake, for me."

"Yes, that's the trouble, Philip, and as long as you are here it will be the same I am afraid. My boy, you must out and earn for yourself awhile."

"When?" said Philip, with startled face.

"Now," said his father, his voice

travelling a little in spite of himself.

"How much do you owe in town?"

"Oh, two or three hundred, I suppose," said Philip, his mind intent on his father's meaning. "Yes, do?"

"I think I have done anything wrong," displeased, do you, father?"

Philip's voice was very anxious.

"No, no, my boy," said his father,

promptly. "No, no, I am not displeased with you in any way, my son.

Heaven knows how I will get on without you—but we won't talk about that

now. You have passed on all the roads.

Here is a check for five hundred dollars. Now go out west and begin at

FOR PRESIDENT.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT
FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.
CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS

Roosevelt's Acceptance.

The formal letter of President Roosevelt, accepting the nomination tendered him by the Republican national convention for President of the United States, is one of the strongest productions of the character we have ever read. Honesty and candor pervade the document throughout. There is no evasion, no attempt at misrepresentation, no artificial seeking to confuse or mislead the public mind. It is the Republican party's platform of principles, the Republican administration's defence and Candidate Theodore Roosevelt's challenge to his political opponents. It has the true ring, and every American citizen of whatever political faith, should read it with interest.

It is a fitting companion piece for the most splendid of documents heretofore submitted by the statesmen who have occupied the same exalted position. No one can read the letter without honestly conceding that it is a heart-felt expression from the man who wrote it, and that it fairly breathes the spirit of purest Americanism.

Sixty Years Married.

When a couple reach their golden wedding anniversary, it is generally considered that they have lived together a remarkably long time. They are only three or four such anniversaries in a city of the size of Quincy in a year, but living quietly on Greenleaf street, at the residence of their son Dr. C. T. Sherman, are Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sherman who will on Monday next reach their sixtieth wedding anniversary, three score years.

Both were born in the same year, 1826, Mr. Sherman in Fairfield, Vt., Jan. 22, and Miss Martha E. Tyler in North Brookfield, Mass., July 20. They were married at the age of 18 years, and forty years lived in North Brookfield. Of the eight children who blessed the union only two are living, Dr. C. T. Sherman of Quincy, and Mr. S. A. Sherman a school teacher at Providence.

They have seven grandchildren, four in Quincy who received their daily watchful care, and three in Providence. Few people of the age of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman are as smart. They are about twenty considerable, and regular attendants of Bethany Congregational church, where their son is a deacon.

No great preparations have been made for the anniversary, as they are unostentatious and avoid social events, but they will be pleased to have their friends call next Monday afternoon. The Patriot extends congratulations.

Cloudburst.

Seldom has there been a harder rain than that of Thursday. It started in the rain Wednesday morning. While it rained hard at times it was not what might be called severe until after midnight. It was about 1 o'clock Thursday morning when the change came. At that time quite a high wind prevailed and the rain fell in sheets. Creaks and weak spots in roofs soon began to leak, and many houses had bad leaks. It rained hard for about an hour. Then it let up somewhat and the wind changed from northeast to northwest.

At daylight it began to rain hard again, and it kept it up steadily until nearly 8 o'clock. It rained hard at that hour but not as hard as it had been raining, and shortly after nine the sun appeared.

The new street railway barn on Hancock street came in for quite a soaking. That part of the building used by the motormen and conductors as a lobby has a flat roof, and during the storm the water came through it in some places in a regular stream. At 8 o'clock the floor of the lobby was covered with three inches of water.

The tracks in some places on the line was washed out and a car leaving the iron on Quincy avenue, disarranged the schedule during the early morning. Extra cars were put out, however, and before 9 o'clock things were pretty well straightened out and schedule time was made.

Gov. Bates Coming.

The committee on the laying of the corner stone of the Y. M. C. A. building, met Tuesday evening at the home of Representative R. R. Freeman, when final arrangements were made for the occasion.

The event will take place on Thursday afternoon, September 29, at 2 o'clock. His Excellency, Gov. John Bates will deliver the address and lay the stone. Brief addresses will be given by Rev. Edward Anderson, D.D., and others.

It is hoped that the people of the city will turn out in large numbers to welcome Gov. Bates and assist in making the event one of historic importance, not only to the Association, but to the city.

Superintendent of Schools.

Jacob Warshaw of this city has been appointed Superintendent of Schools for the District of Humacao, Porto Rico. Mr. Warshaw ranked first in the competitive examinations for superintendents held last June. About thirty candidates presented themselves for the examination, which required an extensive knowledge of the Spanish language—both written and oral—also English school supervision, correspondence in both languages, pedagogy, and a very intimate knowledge in Spanish of the school laws of Porto Rico.

Humacao is one of the largest districts, and comprises three distinct school boards. The work connected with the duties of the position of superintendent of schools in Porto Rico is arduous, but we have no doubt concerning Mr. Warshaw's ability to successfully perform the requirements of his new position.

During the summer Mr. Warshaw was acting superintendent of San Juan. He is a graduate of the Quincy High school and Harvard 1900.

"The Heart's Highway," a fascinating love romance of colonial days by Mary E. Wilkins, will begin in the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

CITY BRIEFS.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Myers are visiting relatives in Maine.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held next Monday evening.

William J. Parker has returned from a two weeks' trip to Philadelphia.

The city bathhouse on Town river will be closed for the season today.

STEARN'S
INTERIOR FINISH.
Everything in Wood or Woodwork, Any Kind of Wood.

Some Cypress
is no better than Hemlock, but Our Florida Oak is of light and uniform color, some of it being not unlike White Mahogany. It is well adapted for fine interior finish and is not expensive.

Our Natural Dark Cypress
is sometimes preferred for Interior Finish, to our better known Light Cypress, although the wood itself in either color may be relied upon in every particular. The darker wood, however, produces a richer effect at a lower cost than the so-called expensive hardwood. See residences, churches, libraries and other buildings already finished.

Our Light Cypress
is equally desirable for either Interior or Exterior Work. Finishes handsomely in natural color. Will take paint better than other woods and paint will not peel off. There is no available wood so desirable for Shingles, Clapboards, Planks and other outside work.

Write us fully regarding the results desired.
We can write you more intelligently and more cheaply.

THE BRYANT & STRATTON SCHOOL

334 BOYLSTON ST.
(opposite the Arlington Street Church).
WILL RE-OPEN IN ITS NEW BUILDING, SEP. 6, 1904.

This school now has the most elegant, complete and extensive private school building in America. Is the planning and furnishing of its NEW BUILDING.

Expense has not been considered even in the minutest detail. New fittings of special design will be found to have taken the place of the ordinary furniture used in school buildings. The entire outfit of the school in its old building has been sacrificed that the school in the new home might have only the newest and best obtainable.

EXPERIENCED TEACHERS.
The only feature recognizable will be the able and experienced corps of teachers who have given this school its wide-spread reputation. The tuition fees are the same as during the previous ten years, and pupils who contemplate attending may congratulate themselves that this year was the chosen time for their commercial course and the finishing of their school work.

COURSE OF STUDY.
The course of study prepares pupils thoroughly for all the duties of the counting-room. Book keeping (by any system), Stenography (Shorthand and Pitman systems), English Composition, Commercial Geography, Normal School Course (preparation for teaching).
Pupils will find the location of the school most accessible from all points; over 400 cars daily, with a stopping place directly in front of the school building.

No agents, solicitors or canvassers are employed by this institution.

WHAT FRANK DID.
"Twas the first of hay-time last summer when 'twas given out to mow that lot of children was to be sent up from the city to stay for a spell with any country folks as was willing to take 'em. I was down to meetin' that Sunday alone, for Hannah, my wife, was up to Knoxville, visitin' her folks. I kinder wanted to put our mows down on the list to take a couple of the children for a spell, but bein' as Hannah wasn't there I giv up the idea. Yer see, I didn't know that she'd be tired, and wouldn't feel like waitin' on 'em."

"We lost our boy John. He died when he was fourteen years old, and his wife, was married two years ago and went to Boston to live. She married well, and she writes to us every week, and has come to see us, and we have been very lonesome. Wife had the melon moved over to inter the parlor, 'cause she couldn't bear to have the water in the parlor. She and I had a fight about it, and she said she was startin' from the city that time."

"We went down to the station along with the rest of the folk, to meet the train the children was on, and when it stopped the white-faced, pinched-looking young ones stood in one corner of the waiting room. They were all dressed in the same way, and they all had that same 'em' look on their faces. I was with 'em all a while, and they were all to go to, and as fast as he called out the names each child was led out and put into the wagons and took away. When we had seen 'em all taken, Hannah and I got into our buggy and drove back to the farm alone. The old lady didn't say nothin' all the way home, and I seen her eyes wet with tears. To the very last she was hopin' for one of 'em children, and 'twas a great disappointment to her."

"Old Nathan Haskell spoke for a boy 'bout ten years old, and we was all surprised that he should take one, for he hated children like all possessed. And it wasn't more'n three days afore we heard that he had been lickin' the boy with a horse whip, and he told 'round to the neighborhood that the boy was the worst young rascal that ever lived. Pooty soon he tried to get some of 'em neighbors to take the boy, but after the accounts they had had none of them would be anything to do with him. One morning Hannah got at me to go and fetch that boy from Nathan's, and I see what we could do with him. I was willin' to go, for I knew that Nathan wasn't no hard to get along with children, so I hitched up and drove off."

"The old man was splittin' wood when I got there; but when I told him what I wanted he showed me the way down and said, 'You can have him, but welcome. I shouldn't hev a thing left on the farm if he were here much longer.'"

"Ain't he behaved himself?" said I. "Behaved himself? I guess not. I've got him locked in the granary; 's his the only place where he can't do any mischief."

"We went down to the granary, and Nathan opened the door and hollered out, 'You've been here an hour, and if you think you can behave, come out. This mornin' I've got him out to see you, and the land knows I'm glad to get rid of ye.'"

"The boy looked dretful cross, and I began to feel sorry that I'd come for him; but I wouldn't back out, so I got him inter the buggy and drove off. After we had got out to the road Nathan hollered, 'Give him lots of lickin'; he had lock him up once in a while; it's all the way you can manage him.'"

"I spoke to the little feller, and he brightened up some, tellin' me his name was Frank Marden, and his mother was dead, but he had a father and step-mother."

"Hannah met us in the yard, and kissed the lad—bless her kind heart, she was longin' for some one to love and care for, and I knew Frank had found a friend, if he only knew enough to keep her so."

"While I was putting the boss back inter the barn the old lady took the boy inter the house, and when he came out again I didn't hardly know him. He had got his face and hands washed, and had on a suit of clothes that used to belong to John. I knew that Hannah thought a good deal of that suit, but she couldn't have put it to better use than she had now. Frank wanted so much to help me that I took him down to the meadow, and set him on the horse-neck and showed him how to run it. He wasn't much used to drivin', but he 'peared to think it was fun and done nicely. He raked a lot that day."

"Well, we kept that boy and found that he was as smart as a steel trap, and he'd mind us to do whatever we wanted. He took to callin' the old lady mother, and it pleased her more'n any thing he could have done."

"I just want to stop right here, and say that there ain't no livin' woman that has got a kinder heart than this same old lady, and if any man has got reason to be thankful for having a good wife, I be the one."

"One day Nathan Haskell came to our house in an awful passion. He said somebody had opened the gate and let his sheep inter his bean, and they had nigh about destroyed 'em. He declared he knew 'twas Frank, 'cause he had seen him down that way. I called the boy and asked him about it. He denied it right up and down. 'I didn't do it,' said he. 'Do you think I'd do as mean a thing, Mr. Haskell?'"

"Of course the old man wouldn't believe him, but I did. And I know there ain't no boys in town any more that plague Nathan when they had a chance, for they hated him like pizen. The old man went off mutterin' threats, but I never said any more about it to Frank."

"Nathan kept some fine thoroughbred cattle, one of 'em being a big bull with a white star in his forehead, and he was from different folks that this bull was gettin' cross and Nathan was advised to keep him in the barn, but wouldn't."

"The next day Frank had gone off. It didn't take us long to miss him, for he was real willin' and handy, helpin' with the chores, and ever there in the pile, 'round the barn, thinkin' how I should miss the boy when he went back to the city. Pooty soon I heard Hannah callin' me from the house, and went up and found her most scared to death. A wagon was comin' up the road with some one in it, and two men in white coats along by its side. Hannah thought as how Frank had been hurt, and I went out to meet the wagon, and soon found that she was right. The poor little fellow lay there all covered with blood, mangled 'n now and then, when the wagon gave an extra jolt. One of the men told me he had been hurt by Nathan Haskell's bull."

"I couldn't help feelin' kinder provoked with the boy for goin' down there and gettin' hurt, when he might hev stayed at home, and had a good time. Hannah wasn't cross, though. She knew he was hurt and sufferin', and all she thought of was gettin' him to bed and tendin' him."

"I sent for the doctor, and he came afore long and 'zained him, and dressed the wounds. He was badly hurt, but the doctor thought he was all right. I was kinder scared, though. After he was all right, I heard a team drive up and goin' out to see who it was, who should I see but Nathan Haskell. I spoke out pooty sudden and says I, 'Look here, Nathan, I don't know what that boy was doin' down to your place today, but he's 'most killed the old lady's bull. I heard a team drive up and goin' out to see who it was, who should I see but Nathan Haskell. The Quincy Patriot.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1904.

Declines Re-election.

City Auditor George A. Sidelinger declines to be a candidate for the office which he has very efficiently held for several years with credit to himself, and to the advantage of the city. As a Councilman and as President of the City Council he was equally successful. Many hoped that Mr. Sidelinger would be ready to relinquish the office of City Auditor that he would step into the Mayor's chair. Undoubtedly he could have had the Republican nomination this year, and with it an election.

But again Mr. Sidelinger declines to be a candidate. His business requires all his time, and he has decided to withdraw from all city offices. He says he duties of City Auditor have increased rapidly, so that now they require considerable more time than formerly. His administration of the office of City Auditor has been remarkably free from friction, although there have been some trying times. But he knew his duties as an official and as an auditor, and he was fearless and independent in the performance of his work.

It is, therefore, with considerable regret that many will learn of the decision of Mr. Sidelinger not again to be a candidate for re-election, and at the same time declining to be a candidate for Mayor of our city.

Mrs. Titus Entertains.

Members of the Massachusetts Society of the Daughters of 1812 and Adams Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, were royally entertained Thursday by their regent, Mrs. Nelson V. Titus, at the Hinchman farm, Squantum.

About forty ladies went down on the half-past ten car from Neponset, and later on brought others, so that over fifty enjoyed the social at the Hinchman farm. The car was served on the lawn by the shore about one o'clock. The clams were steamed over a huge fire on the beach and were delicious.

Besides the clams, members had brought box lunches, and hot coffee and clam bouillon was served by the hostess. Those who found the out door life in the spacious parlor and were interested in the historic letters, autograph letters, pictures and souvenirs collected by the hostess.

Others walked the beach to Squam Rock, to the Myles Standish and to Squantum Inn. Most of the ladies left on the four o'clock car, after lunch and a short rest.

Miss Elizabeth Porter Gould of Boston was among the guests, and following her custom when visiting a new place, she walked her hand on the waters of the bay. She has dipped her hands into the water of streams and lakes of many climes and countries.

Horrid Street Car Accident.

A crowded trolley car from Boston was blown to pieces about 7.30 o'clock on Wednesday evening as it was passing through Melrose. The car, which struck a 50-pound case of dynamite which had fallen a few minutes before from a loaded express wagon.

The explosion shattered the car to kindling wood, killing nine and injuring some forty more; some will not recover. The accident was one of the most terrible which ever happened in Massachusetts and was attended by distressing circumstances which tested to the utmost the fortitude of those upon whom fell the work of rescuing the dead and dying from the awful wreck. Disembodied bodies were hurried about in all directions.

The scene of the accident was at the corner of Wyoming avenue and Main street directly in front of the Masonic temple and not a house within the radius of 700 feet escaped shattered windows, so terrible was the force of the explosion which was heard miles away.

Winifred F. Howe the motorman was instantly killed.

Roy E. Fenton, the driver of the express wagon, has been arrested and taken to Cambridge jail, to wait trial charged with manslaughter.

According to the opinion of a leading Boston lawyer the only chance of the victims of the explosion recovering damages is from R. T. Fitzgerald, the owner of the express wagon from which the dynamite is alleged to have been dropped, and even he will not be held responsible unless it be shown that his employee, Roy E. Fenton, now under arrest, was negligent in handling of the staff.

The city of Melrose is not responsible for the explosive was in the hands of an independent contractor. The railroad is not responsible because the accident occurred through no fault of any of its employees, and even the independent contractor, Fitzgerald, is not responsible, unless it be shown that his employee or agent, Fenton, did not use the care of a man of ordinary intelligence and caution could reasonably be expected to exercise under the circumstances.

New Bridge.

A large gang of men are at work at the site of the new bridge on Hancock street near the Atlantic depot, and have made considerable progress. The new railway has a gang at work relocating its track on the east side of the bridge, so that work may proceed on the west side.

Contractor Cashman gives notice that after today the old bridge will be closed to travel for a short time during construction of the new bridge, making it necessary for all teams to go via Squantum and Atlantic streets between Quincy and Boston.

Probably the bridge will not be closed many weeks, as the contractor realizes the importance of keeping this main artery from Boston to the South shore towns open for travel.

It is said that the grade of the bridge and approaches will not be changed, as many teamsters anticipated, and they are sorry to hear it, because it is one of the worse grades between Quincy and Boston.

The eleventh reunion of the Weymouth Old Folks' Fair was held Sept. 16, at the Union church, South Weymouth. There were 150 present and their combined ages aggregated over 12,000 years. Dinner was served at noon, after which they were addressed by Bates Torrey, Rev. Daniel Waldron and John J. Lough.

The time has expired for filing nominations with the City Clerk for the joint city caucus, but the Republicans, Socialists and Democrats have their papers in the order named before the time expired Monday evening.

Electricity vs Steam.

President Charles S. Mellen of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. in his annual report of the company, says, "The present cost of doing the suburban business is excessive, and it is only by increasing the volume largely we can hope for remuneration. To handle the same as at present is a burden, and to increase the volume and reduce cost through substitution of electricity for steam seems the only solution."

The report shows that the total gross earnings from operation were $48,292,000, of which amount the operating expenses were 72.82 percent, or $35,150,210, leaving the net income from operation $13,141,790. The income from all other sources was $908,425, making the total income $14,050,215.

The increase in gross earnings was entirely in the first six months of the year, namely, from July 1 to Dec. 31. Since Jan 1 there has been a noticeable decrease.

This decrease was much larger than that usually occurring in a presidential year, and is attributable partially to a very cool summer and to the depression in the cotton textile industry.

The severity of the winter season, which was unprecedented and caused material losses in the cost of operation, the losses occasioned by strikes and the depression in business rendered necessary serious reductions in the operating expenses to offset.

Congregational Conference.

The Norfolk Conference of Congregational churches which will meet with Bethany church of Quincy next Tuesday, will hold sessions at 9.30 A. M. and 1.30 P. M. There will be a basket lunch at 12.30, when the ladies of Bethany church will provide coffee and rolls.

The morning session will be devoted to problems affecting the future prosperity of the church. Each address will be followed by discussion.

Rev. T. B. McAllister of Cohasset will lead the devotional service. Rev. C. E. Stowe of Bridgewater will speak on "The Church in the cost of operation." Rev. H. W. Kimball will follow with an address on "The un-church community," and Rev. C. M. Southgate of Abundant will consider "The wonderful resources of the church."

At 1.15 P. M. Rev. W. L. Beard of Fitchburg will deliver an address on "Our work in foreign lands" and will be followed by an offering. A solo is promised by Mrs. Edith Carr. The sermon will be by Rev. C. F. Hill of Cranston of Bridgewater.

Rev. Alan Hudson of Brockton, formerly of Quincy, will be chosen moderator of the conference. Thirty-six churches are affiliated, but a general invitation is extended to all third party churches of Quincy and vicinity.

Lost Children.

The lost child signal was given on the fire alarm at 6.50 Tuesday evening, because of the absence of two children on Summer street, about 4 years of age who were thought to have been out together. Their names were Snow and Marr, and they were soon found.

Officer Crocker also found a stray four-year-old in City Square shortly after 10 A. M. Tuesday. About 2 P. M. he was identified as Charles Wilbur of Wollaston, whose friends were searching for him.

The police were notified about ten o'clock Friday morning that two young children residing on Newcomb place were missing, and a description given. Their names were Willie Smith and Joseph Goodson both in their third year. They were found about an hour later on the railroad between School street and Granite street near the scene of the fatality of Wednesday.

The semi-annual convention of the Norfolk County Association of the King's Daughters and Sons, will be held in the Methodist church, West Medway, Thursday, Oct. 6. The program will include address by Mrs. E. E. Thayer, of Quincy, on the subject of "The Twilight Hour," which will be conducted by Mrs. Mary M. Sawtelle.

A Good President.

The sixth convention of Norfolk County L. A. A. O. H. was held in Deacon hall Boston on Saturday. Miss Eliza C. Sheahan of Quincy as county president presided.

Miss Katherine E. Sheridan of Randolph, national vice president of the Ladies' Aux. A. O. H., was guest. Rev. Fr. Chittick of Hyde Park, county chaplain, addressed the convention.

Nineteen delegates representing fifty-four of the churches of Norfolk county were present. Report for the last two years showed a remarkable increase in the membership and standing of the order.

Miss Sheahan retiring from her office of county president, Miss Margaret Donovan of East Weymouth was unanimously elected county secretary.

Mrs. Mary Callahan of Franklin was the treasurer.

Miss Sheridan, national vice president, made a few remarks and congratulated members on their force of officers.

Miss Sheahan is to be congratulated on her good work in the order during the past year. She was elected county president. Her work has been rewarded in a way as she was honored at the last State Convention of L. A. A. O. H. held in Holyoke, in being unanimously elected to the position of state vice president of L. A. A. O. H.

Norfolk county is to have a new town, the town of Wrentham having voted favorably on the request of Plainville to be set off as a town by itself.

Nedham's tax rate is $17.50.
